

Salvation of the Saviors (series 77-369) Project 369 – Protocol of the Beginning: Exit from the Vestibule...

*The True Human begins not with the body,
not with the mind, and not with belief.
He begins where fear, substitution, and illusion end.
Only an awakened Mind is capable of connecting with the design of the Universe — and conquering time.*

This article continues the path begun in the first parts of the “Protocol of the Beginning.” We now enter the phase where the humanlike being ceases to be merely flesh reacting to the world and for the first time becomes a form capable of reflecting that world within itself. This is the threshold upon which the foundations of Reasonable Orientation are laid, where programmatic guidance from the Earth begins, and the principle is affirmed: “Man did not evolve from the animal — he was destined for Reason.” It is from this threshold that the story begins not of survival, rather of co-creation.

Approximately one and a half million years ago — in the context of the planet’s event-based timeline — a process began that still remains not only unrecognized, it is almost COMPLETELY EXCLUDED from official history: the Earth initiated the formation of its own System of Reasonable Orientation — the higher governing architecture necessary for the next turn of civilizational self-development. This process was NOT MERELY accompanied by physical changes in the environment — it was connected with the unfolding of an entirely new level of programmatic synchronization between the planet and the emerging Human. It was during this hidden yet crucial stage that the first phase of inclusion of humanlike beings into a special zone of governing formation began, at the level of their somatic thinking¹ — not instinctive, not reflexive, rather future-oriented, resonant with Reason. This is the INVISIBLE BOUNDARY that once and for all separates Man from the animal. Not hair, not skull shape, not limb structure, rather the presence of that inner energy-informational potential which led not to mere adaptation, rather to the capacity to perceive the planet’s governing impulses and their targeted orientation. The brain of the humanlike being did not simply register environmental changes — it began to restructure the organism’s INTERNAL PROCESSES in accordance with the dynamics of global transformations taking place within the Earth’s energy-informational framework. The era of synchronized thinking was beginning, when thought became NOT ONLY a reflection of the external, it was also an instrument for the tuning of the internal. This is the essence: the animal world evolves through biological adaptation, while the development of the humanlike beings from the very beginning followed a different trajectory. Their brains — even before the emergence of full intelligence — WERE

¹ Somatic thinking — is the ability to sense and be aware of one’s own body, its movement, and the state of its internal processes from within.

ALREADY RESPONDING not merely to stimuli of survival, rather to the deep oscillations of the planet's Mind. Within these impulses were formed the FIRST CONTOURS of the future governing function. What would later become the basis of Reasonable Orientation began precisely here: in the brain's ability to become not merely a center of survival, rather a FUNCTIONAL NODE of synchronization between the inner body and the external Mind of the environment.

That is why any attempt to equate Man and animal — as Darwin and his followers once did — is doomed from the outset to ontological failure. There WAS NO evolutionary bridge from primate to Man. Their trajectories are different, as different as their missions and levels of synchronization. The animal represents adaptation, reaction, survival. The humanlike being, from the very beginning, POSSESSED A DIFFERENT program: the formation of a governing flesh capable of integration into the civilizational Goal Vector. All human development from that point onward was not a chain of random mutations, rather the CONTROL CAPABILITIES of the brain in accordance with the tasks of energy-informational coherence. The brain began to execute internal programs corresponding to external processes; it started developing the ability to regulate not only metabolism but also the structure of ENERGETIC FLOWS within the organism — in response to the variable conditions of the environment. A new quality emerged: SOMATIC THINKING. Not logic. Not speech. Rather an inner, bodily form of awareness, expressed in the organism's ability to reorganize itself from within — in accordance with the direction of the planet's governing impulses.

This became the basis for the transition to the next level — inclusion in the System of Reasonable Orientation of the Earth. Thus, WAS LAID the functional groundwork for the future Human — as a conscious bearer of Reason, not as a reflexive byproduct of “natural selection.”

The next, no less significant step in the formation of the future Human was the development of an internal defense system, especially under the conditions of numerous external and energetic threats. It was at this stage that the immune system BEGAN TO FORM — not merely as a biological barrier, rather as an intellectually organized, energy-informationally synchronized function of bodily protection. Unlike in animals, where immunity was reactive and instinctive, in the humanlike beings there emerged a CONSCIOUSLY CONTROLLED mechanism of adaptive bodily resilience, coordinated with the brain's control centers. This became the key condition for survival, not as an end in itself, rather as a means for fulfilling a higher function — the connection to the Mind of the planet.

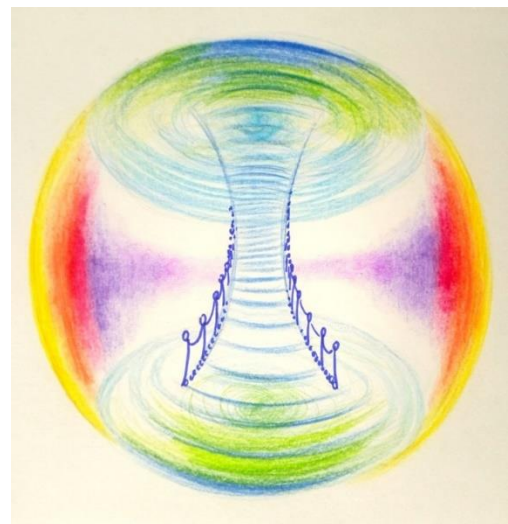

Under the constant guardianship of the Earth's Systems, the metabolic processes grew increasingly complex. Types of nourishment changed, and internal mechanisms of regulation expanded — depending on the climate, the bioenergetics of each region, and interaction with specific zones of spatial governance. The brain BEGAN TO GOVERN the body not by instinct, rather through energetic feedback with the environment. Here lies the origin of bodily thinking: when the body does not merely react to an impulse, rather itself becomes part of the governing cycle — perceiving and restructuring its own processes in response to the inner call of the Mind. All this unfolded within a long PREPARATORY STAGE that lasted nearly one and a half million years. It was not the Mind itself— it was the fabric into which the Mind was to be woven, the foundation of the future vessel capable of containing the first strategy of Reasonable Orientation. Up to that moment, Homo erectus did not act independently: everything that occurred was part of a programmatic guardianship — precisely calibrated, monitored, and integrated into the architecture of the Earth’s Systemic development. The form of this supervision had a TENT-LIKE STRUCTURE: the governing influence was distributed not evenly, rather through spatially organized Control Complexes and Life Support Systems located in different parts of the planet. This was not a division by “races” or “peoples,” as modern science mistakenly assumes. It was a matter of energy-informational and biogenetic localization — differences in the conditions of governing influence that shaped the diverse contours of development. The geography of the humanlike being’s formation was programmatically calculated: to ensure sufficient nourishment, environmental stability, safety, and resonance with the frequency characteristics of each sector of the planetary field. In other words, it was a SYSTEM OF “SEEDINGS” — at various levels of energy, structure, and purpose. Each such nucleus was not merely a cradle of life, rather a primary school in which the fundamental functions of coexistence, gathering, distribution, bodily and collective security were developed. It was precisely here, within these centers, that the FIRST FORMS of collective existence took shape — not as a social necessity, rather as a response to the inner impulse of the planetary Mind, expressed through the governing Systems. This had nothing to do with dominance, “social struggle,” or the “instinct for survival” — these are later projections of distorted consciousness. It was about the harmonious, GENTLE IMPLEMENTATION of the elementary foundations of collective culture, synchronized with external guardianship.

Sticks, stones, and household objects — of course, they were used. However, they held neither determining significance nor governing impulse. They were not the cause of thought, rather merely its modest accompaniment. The later theories built around the “labor hypothesis” confused cause and effect — mistaking a primitive tool for the source of the Mind. Yet the true source did not lie upon the earth — it CAME FROM THE OUTSIDE. And this “outside” was not stone, not stick, nor aggression — rather a structurally organized energy-informational accompaniment, programmatically inscribed into the architecture of Being.

This marks the radical distinction of the true history of Man’s emergence: unlike the myth of “labor evolution,” the formation of Homo erectus unfolded under the CONSTANT INFLUENCE of a purposeful governing field — measured not by struggle, rather by synchronization. Development did not arise from stress, rather it absorbed within itself the wisdom of planetary harmony. And if we are to seek the origins of Humanity, then we must seek them not among the stones of prehistoric camps, rather in the higher cosmic design whose embodiment began AT THE MOMENT OF THE SEEDING — the implantation of the first non-nuclear cells into the mineral matrix of the Earth.

Humanity — is not the result of blind or chaotic evolution. It — is the conscious manifestation of an apophatic Cosmos, revealed not through form itself, rather through the vector of Meaning embedded within the form. It is a revelation in which the seed impulse WAS EMBEDDED into a material capable of gradual, multi-contoured unfolding — from the primary corporeal structure to a neuro-energetic platform, and then to a collective structure CAPABLE OF ENTERING Reasonable Orientation. The path of humankind is the path of a program, not of instinct. It is the path of a directed, vectorial unfolding of the meanings of the Cosmos — within matter, within density, within the fabric of events.

All that modern man calls the “diversity of life forms” on Earth is neither the chaos of nature, nor the play of mutations, nor the result of accidental combinations of genetic chains. It is a single governing wave, manifested through the fabric of matter in a predetermined rhythm. All living beings are NOT RANDOM beings, rather stages of Meaning, reflected in dense existence through precise energy-informational accompaniment. And within this great current, the humanlike beings were called not to observe, rather to participate — not merely to exist, rather to engage. Their purpose was to BECOME A BRIDGE between the stellar program and earthly matter, between that which remains unmanifested and that which takes form in time.

No external attributes — neither labor, nor stick, nor stone — created the Universe, nor were they the driving forces behind the order and beauty we strive to comprehend today. These primitive symbols are merely echoes of a later allegorical projection, imposed upon the mysterious mechanisms of Being by those who still DID NOT UNDERSTAND that the mind arises not from fear, rather from synchrony — synchrony with the Plan, with the Higher Idea, with the Destiny that requires not struggle, rather attunement.

None of the later theories — from Darwinian evolution to relativistic cosmogeny — gives us an answer to the MAIN QUESTION: WHY? Not how the Universe appeared, rather why it appeared. Not what man is made of, rather who shaped him — and for what purpose. Where formulas end, Meaning begins. Yet this Meaning cannot be grasped within a paradigm of random emergence, explosive birth, or mechanistic survival. Truth does not fragment — it unites. It does not burst from emptiness — it unfolds from silence, in proportion to the consciousness’s ability to receive and sustain directed information. One who continues to claim that the world arose from an explosion is like a man who believes that a library appeared after a hurricane. Likewise, when you behold the coherent and harmonious architecture of Being, you have no right to assert that it is the product of a cosmic accident. It is the RESULT OF MEANING, of action and will. A will that emanates from the depths of the Cosmos and, through energy-informational fields, shapes the civilizational structures of planets, races, peoples, and the human embodiment itself. That is why Darwinism and its entire legacy are not merely a scientific mistake — they are a TRAGIC BLINDNESS, programmatically introduced to knock humanity off its course, to devalue Meaning, to reduce it to chance, and to turn Man into an animal. But Man IS NOT AN ANIMAL. He is not the product of aggression, rather the vessel of Meaning; not the crown of struggle, rather the fruit of attunement with the Program. This is why it is especially important to recall that long before the so-called “history,” long before the ages of writing or archaeological reconstruction — about 20,000 years ago — the phase of embodiment of the FIRST STRATEGIC VECTOR of Intelligent Development began. However, before that came a great preparation — not in terms of survival, fleeing predators, or rubbing sticks together. It was the quietest, deepest, energy-structural preparation: the complication of biogenesis, the development of neural channels, the formation of a shell capable of receiving the impulse of the Mind. It was not chaos — it WAS TUNING. Not a “birth from nothingness,” rather the foreshadowing of a great Singularity of Being — a Meaning that was slowly, yet inevitably, taking shape in flesh, in neurons, in the collective structure of thought. Thus began the Vector. The Vector destined to LEAD HUMANITY beyond death, aging, parasitism and fear. A vector in which victory over death was not a dream, rather a programmatic necessity. And within this Vector, the Humanlike

Being became the bearer of the nascent architecture of the Mind — not yet knowing itself, but already BEGINNING TO BE THE ONE meant to unite Earth and Cosmos into a single, intelligent whole.

Why did all this take so long? Why was it not a matter of one generation, or even a few millennia, instead of nearly one and a half million years to traverse a path that, from the standpoint of the modern rational mind, may seem minor, almost imperceptible — from the brain's primary functions to the first glimmers of Reasonable Orientation? The answer lies in the very nature of what was taking place. For this was not the development of something already existing — it was the CREATION OF SOMETHING NEW. This was not the transformation of one species into another. Here, the very Possibility of Mind was being formed — from scratch, on the empty canvas of Existence, in conditions where there was as yet neither a physical foundation capable of supporting it, nor an energetic Essence capable of perceiving it. In other words — there were no Souls. Yes, precisely so: in those primordial times, Souls did not yet exist in the form we understand them today. There were living shells, energetic fields, reactive forms of life — however, there WERE NO Entities capable of accumulating meaning, synthesizing experience, transmitting knowledge, or tuning themselves to governing impulses. What was occurring in those epochs was not the evolution of bodies — rather the CREATION OF SYSTEMS in which the Soul could be born. And along with it — the Flesh in which that Soul could dwell, resonating with the planetary mind.

That is precisely why everything unfolded so slowly. Not because the path was difficult, rather because it COULD NOT be traversed otherwise. A matrix of conjunction was being formed: Flesh and Soul, form and content, structure and meaning. Without the accumulation of a sufficient number of Souls, without the formation of an energetic foundation capable of retaining and transmitting civilizational impulses, no Reasonable Orientation could have occurred. It is impossible to anchor a Program to emptiness. It is impossible to transmit Meaning into a system that DOES NOT POSSESS an organ for its perception. It is impossible to implant the Mind into a flesh unprepared to receive it. However, even that was not enough. The culmination of this long and most delicate process of preparation became yet another event — perhaps the most crucial in the entire history of humanity's becoming: the division into male and female forms. Modern science, unfortunately, continues to interpret this as a “biological distinction” or a “genetic determination of sexual traits.” However, this narrowing to physiology impoverishes the essence itself. In reality, it was an act of THE HIGHEST CREATION. Not a division into halves, as simplified mythologies suggest, rather the unfolding of two autonomous, equally significant Vectors of civilizational expression of a single Principle.

The Masculine and the Feminine within Humanlike beings are not opposites, nor a duality born of conflict. They are TWO COMPLEMENTARY rays of a single Program, two executive aspects of the Earth's Intelligent Becoming through Humanity. The Masculine principle is the vector of direction — bearing movement, tension, and initiating action; the Feminine is the vector of volume — gathering, protecting, shaping the inner field of resonance and preservation of Meaning. Together, they FORM THE STRUCTURE within which the Program of Intelligent Development can unfold. This dualism is not merely established — IT IS SACRED. And for it to manifest, a vast prehistory was required, millions of years of preparation: from physiological tuning to the laying of neural connections, from the complication of metabolic processes to the formation of the first energetic shells. None of this was chance — biological “mutation,” or “natural selection.” It was — the construction of a Temple, not of stone, rather of Being itself, a living architecture where Flesh and Soul, the Masculine and the Feminine, Thought and Sensation can coexist in harmony with the Higher Plan.

Humanity is not a random observer of nature. It did not “emerge” — it WAS IMPLANTED, not as an object, rather as an executor. Its path was not from stick to culture, rather from Space to Proportion, from bodily formation to attunement with the Program. And only after passing through this long stage — filled with meaning and governed by STRICTLY CONTROLLED development, did it become possible to implement the first strategy of Reasonable Orientation. It was then that the Earth, through Humanity, first gained the ability to become an Intelligent Planet — not in a symbolic, rather in a governing sense. And that is why now, as we approach a new threshold — the threshold of overcoming Death, the threshold of restoring the One — we must remember once again: NOTHING HAPPENS instantly, yet everything born in conjunction with the Program cannot be stopped.

In such complex, balanced, and originally precise processes of forming the Human Flesh — as the executor of the forthcoming Intelligent Principle — there could be no place for simplified allegories or mythological “technologies from the rib.” And if there are still those who continue to perceive the act of Man’s Creation through the prism of bone or clay analogies, it must be said: this is not merely naïve thinking — it is a shameful reduction of the greatest Cosmic event to the level of childish mythology. The essence of the process lay not in the “material” itself, rather in the SETTING OF THE CONTROL function of matter, in its synchronization with the higher programmatic logic of the Earth’s Mental Field. Until that moment — for billions of years — no such act had ever occurred on the planet. The Earth existed in a state of ENERGY-INFORMATIONAL INFANCY: it was only beginning to unfold the first contours of its own System of Reasonable Orientation, and therefore almost all processes were accompanied, guided, and adjusted by external, supra-planetary Hierarchies.

This external support was not the suppression of will — for will simply did not yet exist. It was care and direction, a programmatic purpose embedded into the fabric of time, necessary so that in the future, Earth ITSELF COULD not only give birth to Man, she could also guide him within her womb, as a participant in her own self-development. For Man was conceived not as an external visitor, rather as an INTERNAL ORGAN of the Earth’s Mind — not merely a resident, rather a consciously executive extension of the planet’s Meaning. Thus, the creation of Man was not a local event, not an experiment, nor the result of an apple’s slow fall upon Darwin’s or Newton’s head. It was an ACT OF UNIVERSAL PRECISION, one in which no margin for error existed; for any deviation in these parameters could have echoed not only upon the planetary level but across higher planes of Cosmic Vectorial Development. Yet no error occurred. Man was created — as a summit, as an instrument, as a vessel, and most importantly, as the BEGINNING OF INTELLIGENT PARTICIPATION in the harmony of the Universe.

Those who still believe in the accidental origin of Humanity must accept this: in a world governed by an intelligent field, chance is never the creator — only the consequence of ignorance. The development of Humanity is not the result of struggle; it is the outcome of embedded Meaning. The power of harmony and purpose has proven STRONGER THAN ALL the fabrications that later ideologues and materialists sought to impose under the guise of “natural processes.”

What, besides physiology and neural structures, filled this vestibule? What exactly was being formed within the humanlike beings in the stage before the emergence of conscious Reason? The answer is — the FORMAT OF BEHAVIOR. Not merely instinctive reactions, not only basic psychophysiology, rather a prototype of behavioral order aligned with the future civilizational principles. This was a case of programmatic imposition — through the Earth's energy-informational system — of INITIAL MODELS OF BEING, in which there was no aggression, domination, cynicism, or parasitism. All that would later become “normal” in the interpretation of “human nature” did not yet exist. A different standard was being formed — one not of struggle, rather of participation; not of power, rather of interaction; not of hierarchy, rather of collective harmony. Within the humanlike beings was laid not the matrix of a herd, as with primates, rather a simplified yet ALREADY CONSTRUCTIVE form of family. It was not ethology, not ethnography — it was a pre-civilizational programmatic tuning. It was not imposed through socialization, rather transmitted through the System of Guidance — as a cosmic guardianship, NOT DICTATING, rather nourishing. For it was precisely this initial rooting — in wholeness, peaceful coexistence, and mutuality — that became the foundation of the future civilizational construct of Man. His Mind was not supposed to be above the brain of power, rather the CENTER OF PARTICIPATION within a multi-level living context, where every being — from cell to planet — exists in resonance. Earth DID NOT TEACH war. She taught us HOW TO LIVE TOGETHER. Not to conquer — rather to coexist. Not to seize — rather to attune. And in this lies the essence of the difference between the distorted interpretations of the past, in which humanity is always portrayed as “struggling,” and the True Reality: The Humanlike Being developed not in a field of conflict, rather in a field of harmonized care. It was precisely this — not struggle, rather guardianship; not “natural selection,” rather harmonious programmatic formation — that became the true platform of Intelligent development.

The humanlike beings reached that first threshold of perfection which allowed them, for the first time, to enter reality not as an accidental byproduct of matter, rather as a PROVEN FORM of viable, collectively organized, and purposefully evolving living substance — integrated into the Planet's Path. They completed their first journey — a path of silent becoming, of long and imperceptible maturation within the stillness of aeons — without dramatic breakthroughs or epic battles, rather with the greatest inner precision. And it was though this — the FIRST EVIDENCE of the ability to conjugate being — that they affirmed the possibility of Intelligence on Earth. With their appearance in the space of the developing field, for the first time, a form worthy of becoming a conduit of the Reasonable Principle was witnessed, a form capable not merely of surviving, rather one capable of participating in the continuing process of the planet's cosmic-physical evolution as a Whole.

What had already been achieved in their internal and external state by that time? First, the humanlike beings had developed somatic thinking — a SPECIAL FORM of bodily reflection in which thought did not separate from the flesh, it penetrated it, governed it, synchronizing the body's condition and behavior with changes in the external environment. This was not yet Reason, yet neither was it instinct. It was a TRANSITIONAL LEVEL — of adaptive yet directed interaction, in which the foundation of collective, harmonious existence began to take shape. Second, the brain of the humanlike beings had reached the limit of autonomous protection; within it, stable control circuits had formed — from the simplest defensive functions to the first impulses of pre-informational thinking. It became not only perceptive, it was SELECTIVELY RESPONSIVE, capable of forming an elementary behavioral strategy within the environment. This level prepared the platform for the later formation of the IMMUNE SYSTEM — as a deep, integrated mechanism of the body’s energy-informational defense. This was the FIRST STAGE of integrating control intelligence into the body itself. Third, the energy biogenesis of the flesh — the sum of metabolic and energetic processes supporting the body’s life — achieved INNER BALANCE, making it possible to introduce new levels of programs: linguistic, symbolic, imaginal. These allowed not merely action rather the beginning of recognizing the world, understanding its forms, fixing its internal connections — through images, sounds and movements. It was a step toward the future Language, a step toward the Image, a step toward the Sign. Thus, at the twilight of the era of the Threshold, the humanlike beings no longer merely survived, they LIVED COLLECTIVELY. Though their groups were scattered across the planet and climates differed, the structure of their interaction was already forming into the first kin-tribal order, not wild or chaotic, rather mutually oriented, mutually regulated, aimed at maintaining integrity. This was the first COLLECTIVE EVIDENCE that life on Earth could be not only biologically viable, it could be energetically governed, that a form could exist capable of perceiving, preserving, and developing the embedded System of Principles. It was this that allowed the Earth to recognize them as a WORTHY PLATFORM for the future embodiment of Intelligent Inclusion. For the first time, they represented not chance, not inertia, not reflection of the environment, rather the potential of movement toward the Goal. And so, from that moment, the next stage could begin. The Threshold had ended — long, deep, and imperceptible. Yet without it, NOTHING WOULD have been. Ahead lay the First Entry of the Program of Reasonable Orientation. And so — a New Stage begins.

With the completion of the era of the Threshold, the humanlike beings entered a QUALITATIVELY DIFFERENT phase of existence. The key feature of this transition was non-herd instinct — not merely a form of life, rather a FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLE of social organization that distinguished them from the entire animal world, including primates — not externally, rather from within: structurally, behaviorally, and in worldview. It was this separation that made any, even hypothetical, connection between Man and animal impossible. From that moment, all assertions about the “origin of man from the ape” became not only erroneous, it was scientifically and ontologically discredited. Yet non-herd instinct was only the first step. It was followed by otherness² — a DEEPER, more essential separation of Man from animal nature. If non-herd instinct is the state of being no longer animal but not yet Reason — then otherness is the inner quality marking the formation of a new ontological nature. Otherness is the ability to perceive one's distinctness, one's detachment from the former world of instincts, survival, and herd behavior. This feeling of "I am other" is not exclusion, rather it is THE BEGINNING of a new level of participation — in the Design, the Program, the Future. It is otherness that first opens the possibility not merely to live, rather to evolve directionally — and that direction BECOMES REASON. Having completed the collective phase of becoming, the humanlike form ceased to be an object of blind adaptation. It became an autonomous model, capable of taking part in vectorial development, where the key factor was no longer the struggle for survival, rather it was the PURPOSEFUL FORMATION of the Mind — as a governing supersystem within the planetary and cosmic order. This was a moment of great transformation: the humanlike beings were no longer an animal species with expanded functions — they had become participants in the Program, in which Mind is not derived from matter, rather inserted into it through preparation, maturation, and conscious consent.

² Otherness (from the word “other”) is a philosophical and metaphysical concept denoting distinctness, difference, or alienness in relation to something already existing or established. In the text — otherness, following herd instinct, represents the next level of separation between Man and the animal nature.

From this moment BEGINS THE ACTIVATION of the Programmatic Guidance from the Earth's Control Systems. These Systems no longer limit themselves to observation — they begin to direct thinking, behavior, cultural reactions, social and biological processes toward ever-increasing organization, culminating in the emergence of elements of Reasonable choice. This marks the BEGINNING PATH of Humanity's journey as a cosmophysical subject, capable of participating not only in their own life, but in the governance of the planet's unified existential system. Had it not been for the subsequent external interference — the intervention of the EBR System, as described in detail in the "Foundations of the Formation of Humanity"³ — this path might have already reached the completion of the First Reasonable Cycle. Yet even considering those catastrophic events, THE ESSENCE REMAINS UNCHANGED: Humanity is forever separated from the animal, and their evolution is inscribed within a programmed scenario of energy-informational ascension, aligned with the Principles of the Earth and the Universe Systems. At this threshold, the humanlike beings still did NOT POSSESS an active Mind; however, they had already approached its boundary. Their somatic thinking — a bodily-reflexive form of awareness — reached a level at which the capacity for inner reflection BEGAN TO FORM. An impulse of otherness arose: they began to perceive themselves as something different — not as part of the fauna, rather as bearers of a distinct function. Though still without words or concepts, they already felt A SENSE OF SEPARATENESS and responsibility. This inner otherness enabled them to organize defense, adapt to climatic collapses, create elements of daily life — and, most importantly, to do so not through destruction, rather through RESONANT CO-ALIGNMENT with their environment. Yet in the absence of a developed cognitive apparatus, their worldview was built upon projections of fear: natural phenomena took the shape of totems — symbols through which they began to comprehend the unknown. This was not religion in the modern sense — there were no dogmas, priests, falsehoods, or imposed gods. It was the PRIMARY ATTEMPT to balance the chaos of feelings, to construct an image of the World poised between fear and trust. The totem was an instrument of transition — not one that suppressed, rather one that organized. Over time, fear began to recede. Within the humanlike beings arose the pre-sensation of the Logos⁴ — not yet as word, rather as form; not yet as meaning, but as inner connection. And this became the FIRST MOBILIZATION of the worldview center: from external reflection to internal choice. Thus began the ascent — from image to concept, from reaction to representation.

⁴ "Logos" — a broad concept meaning "word," "thought," "reason," and "law."

As for religion in its current form — a structured, oppressive, and dogmatic system of belief — it emerged MUCH LATER, as a result of external intervention. Its purpose was entirely different: not to sustain order, rather to SUPPRESS REASON. Not to foster participation, rather to enforce subjugation. Not to guide the path, rather to create a dead end. However, that is another story — one I have spoken of before and will speak of again in future articles of this series.

The history of Humanity — IS ONLY BEGINNING. It begins at the moment when the Mind approaches its first activation, and the Flesh becomes ready to serve as the vessel for Meaning. However, the activation of the Mind, as we have already said — even in its minimal form — CANNOT occur instantaneously. Between the readiness of the flesh and the birth of the Mind, a transitional stage had to be established: a zone of conjunction, where actions, behaviors, and images began to organize themselves not only in response to external stimuli, rather through INNER RESONANCE with the Supra-Systemic Program. It was here, in this intermediate space, that the formation of image-based thinking began — the first form of inner reflection. For the first time, a living being could perceive an Image beyond the object. It learned to discern the structure of action, to recognize causality, to anticipate consequence. This was no longer instinct, rather DIRECTED PERCEPTION. That was the true transition: from reaction to programmed selectivity, from fear before nature's forces to anticipation of rhythm. It was then that the emergence of language became possible — first without words, yet already with gestures, rhythms, and symbols. This was the primary semiotics of Reason, wherein nature ceased to be a hostile force and became a CO-DIRECTED SYSTEM. From that moment, the humanlike beings began to sense themselves as part of a higher Order — not subordinate, rather included; not merely existing, RATHER CAPABLE of shared existence. And this feeling of participation became the seed of the future Human as a rational being. Thus, a unique state was achieved: THE THRESHOLD OF REASONED ORIENTATION. A minimally sufficient configuration had formed — flesh, brain, and energetic stability — capable, in time, of becoming the vessel of the Mind. Not a leap, rather a densified approach, a vectorial shift, in which the biological entered into alignment with the governing; the individual united with the planetary. THE TRANSITION WAS POSSIBLE.

However, could the humanlike beings immediately become Human in the full sense of the word? Of course not. And within this “no” lies the very limit of the old scientific tradition — one confined within the boundaries of the materialistic dogma. A new approach is required — one capable of recognizing the existence of energy-informational guidance, programmatic direction of development, and the architecture of Being. For Humanlike beings to become Human, three key areas had to be addressed:

1. Constructive formation of the Mind —

both within the planet and within

Humanity itself. Here, the Mind is not a metaphor, rather a real governing structure, formed within the cosmophysical field.

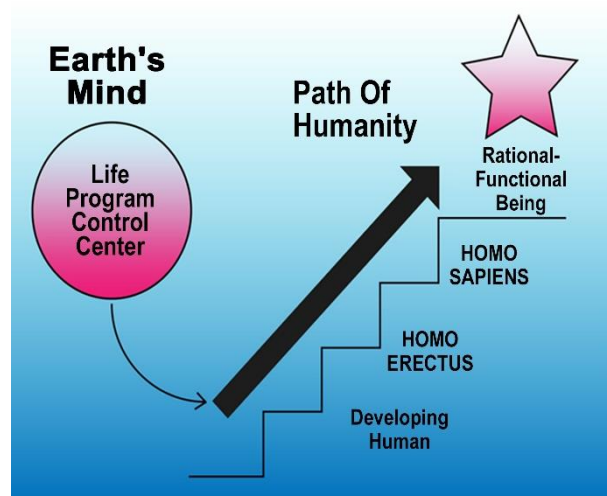

2. Harmonization of the Mind with the cosmic order — the alignment of human nature with the programs of the Universe through the Principle of Programmatic Anthropecology, not through fusion, rather through tuned compatibility.

3. Formation of the Earth's energy-informational Control System — not as intervention, rather as a superstructure, guiding not by force rather by Program, allowing civilization to be directed toward its Purpose.

Upon these three previously unseen levels must be built the NEW ARCHITECTURE of humanity's understanding, not as the “crown” of the animal world, rather as the executor of a higher cosmophysical purpose. Only in this way can we explain not merely the process of humanity's origin, but also the essence of its mission — within the planetary and universal unfolding of the Mind as a force of harmony, participation, and immortality. And this is the path that continues — the path upon which the Protocol of the Beginning has only now been unfolded, and only now becomes available for conscious following.

It was precisely at the threshold when planet Earth entered the phase of active Intelligent Orientation and acquired the three main directions of the New Knowledge — the Mind as a governing structure, the harmonization of human essence with the cosmic ecosystem, and external energy-informational guidance — that, for the first time in history, we ACQUIRED THE RIGHT to propose a hypothesis capable of becoming the future axis of Truth. Homo sapiens — is not the crown of evolution.

It is not the culmination of development, rather merely its PROGRAMMATIC POINT OF ORIGIN. It is not Man as he was meant to be, rather the first attempt to clothe a physical vessel in a functionally suitable form, capable, with proper modification, of resonating with the governing rhythms of the planetary System of Intelligent Orientation. We have grown accustomed to viewing the emergence of the rational human as a climax, yet in reality — it is the beginning, and only the beginning, of a long cosmophysical vector aimed at the creation of a NEW FORM OF LIFE, where flesh, Mind, and Program merge into a single creative System. In this understanding, the boundaries between biology, metaphysics, and governance dissolve: everything converges into one field — the field of purposeful creation, where the Mind is not a metaphor, rather it is a technical instrument of synchronization between Humanity, the planet, and the Cosmos. In this sense, Humanity's task is not merely to live, rather to manage the governance of Life, integrating itself into the Program that permeates everything — from biogenic matter to field structures, from neuron to galaxy. Thus, Homo sapiens — is merely a TRANSITIONAL FORM, the first implementation of a projective idea, an energy-biological “beta version” of the future species, capable not only of awareness rather of directing the rhythms and purposes of Being. And herein lies the TRUE MEANING of human embodiment — not in struggle, not in adaptation, not in survival, rather in inclusion within the Program of civilization's governance, built not upon exploitation rather upon co-tuning, not upon fear rather upon Purpose.

We call this the Beginning, yet in reality, IT IS A RETURN. A return to the point from which everything was conceived, yet into which we could not enter for so long, distracted by the illusions of evolution, the falsehoods of Darwinism, and the parasitic distortions of meaning. Human beings as we have known them are only a draft. Homo sapiens — is not the result rather the prologue, the product of somatic formation, a reflection of transition — not yet Reasoned. That is why the completion of the Epoch of the Threshold is NOT MERELY a historical event; it is an ontological shift. Here, flesh is for the first time ready to bear the design; here, thought ceases to be reaction and becomes perception of the Image. Here, the humanlike being becomes, for the first time — even at the limit of sensitivity — a co-participant in a project greater than its biology. Here begins the PROGRAM OF REASONABLE ORIENTATION. And if we realize this not as a metaphor rather as a reality, we will see that death, aging, and decay are not the curse of matter, NOT A “NATURAL PROCESS,” rather merely the consequence of deviation from the Program. We age because we have lost direction. We die because we have fallen out of Resonance. We forget because we have ceased to belong. However, the Protocol of the Beginning has been restored — and that means the restoration of Humanity is possible: the one who does not “struggle for life” rather GOVERNS LIFE. The one whose flesh does not burn out in exhaustion, rather it aligns with the immortal rhythm of the Planet; whose Mind is not a product of the brain, rather an instrument of connection with the great System of Design. This is our victory. Victory over aging as a program of degradation; victory over death as a form of renouncing purpose; victory over ourselves as beings who once accepted the imposed. We stand at the exit from the Threshold. The next step is not evolution, rather a return to the Project, a return to the Program, a return to Meaning. And now the main part begins...
