

Salvation of the Saviors

(33-series 369)

The Meaning

Society is developing, and people are still trying to comprehend today's reality with the help of outdated, but familiar concepts. We are always enthralled by concepts and the images they give birth to, regardless of whether these concepts are suitable for us or not. Man becomes free only when he gives birth to new concepts and moves forward, developing those concepts for understanding today's world.

To protect yourself from danger, you need to understand the source of danger. This will allow you to comprehend the nature of the source and understand its purpose. Next, we will understand the plan and means of implementation, build a line of defense, strategy and tactics. All this is possible IF the source of the danger is CLEAR.

Let's approach the problem through the analysis of intelligible facts. To begin with, every great action requires appropriate doers. If there is an atomic bomb, then there are physicists who developed this bomb. If there is a world-scale action in steps of 500 years, therefore, THERE are "DOERS" who think and act on such a scale. And not individuals, but a self-reproducing organism, something like a school. The big strategy is implemented only by schools, not by individuals. To have such a school, a social mechanism is needed to isolate from society people with the appropriate talents. The rarer talents are needed, the wider the "sampling area" should be. In some cases, the territory of interests should be at least a country or the whole of humanity. I will give an example using the mathematical elite. It exists due to the fact that the whole of humanity is "sifted," in search of mathematicians. Children of all nationalities and social strata learn mathematics at school, then at the institute. As a result, talented mathematicians who form the elite are singled out.

If the sample area were smaller, for example, only from relatives of mathematicians or only from residents of a certain country, mathematics as a science would die in a couple of generations. The stability of the mathematical school is achieved by SIFTING through the WHOLE of HUMANITY. This allows you to maintain a high intellectual level, and mathematics develops. But my reader already understands perfectly well that the "sifting of all mankind" was a process that took place strictly within the framework of creating brain genotypes that predominate at certain times and in certain places. Therefore, only a few can operate on the "world" history in steps of 500 years. This is an even rarer talent than mathematics. Therefore, the sampling area should be the whole of humanity. You need a special system, the purpose of which is to raise a replacement. If there is no such system, there can be no change in personnel, and therefore no action.

It is human nature to seek a way out of new problems with the help of old solutions. History teaches: THERE is NO WAY OUT IN THE OLD. In general, people agree with this, but not understanding what to do, they return to the old. Today, one can observe a lot of senseless efforts aimed at the formation of communities, parties, states and, of course, the CREATION of THEIR IMAGE. The apotheosis of this fuss should be the creation of an image of a country in which you have to live and create, learn and develop, relying on your (everyone's) knowledge. But this line of thought leads to a dead end. No construction of the house could save from the flood. Neither the community nor the state will save you from the impending processes. Sooner or later, the community will be crushed by the "surrounding world," like an eggshell by a tractor. This is confirmed by the example of all communities – they are rotting at the same rate as the world. With the state, the evidence base is NOT AS obvious as with smaller entities. It seems that if you build a strong state (or even better, an empire), modern threats will be solved. The imagination draws wonderful rulers, a stable economy, a strong army and further down the list. You can create something like an iron curtain and not just hold the defense, but by accumulating forces go on the offensive and expand your borders. All this seems like a good solution, because it is FAMILIAR AND PATRIOTIC. But this effect occurs due to a small comprehension of the system. The problem lies on a different scale. You can see it if you consider the topic not from the usual, but from the appropriate height.

So, let's consider the state as a prototype of the ark. Let's fix it: the state is a hierarchical structure. It consists of a supporting part (the backbone), which has the main human qualities: spirit, mind, will, honor, etc., as well as a secondary part. Since the spirit, mind and will are not inherited, the backbone cannot be created from the children of the "elite," because there is no one to choose from. Hence, the weakness and instability of the system is inevitable. Some apologists of the theory that only the state can protect people from impending danger say that ALL THE PROBLEMS of the STATE are from ordinary people who are not able to be citizens. They say that citizens are a special breed of people, and if you separate the mass from the citizens, as in Rome, a powerful empire will arise. For a long time, the only supranational player was the so-called "unknown world-scale grouping" (for those who know - today, these are the remnants of the 461 brain genotypes as an element of power management).

She organized and is still organizing orange revolutions, brings puppets to power, spreads democracy – works on a global scale. Today's NEW UNDERSTANDING of the WORLD has given rise to opposition to this group. We are potentially superior to the enemy, but our capabilities have NOT yet been REALIZED. There can be no haste here, within the framework of ongoing processes that are not created by people, but implemented through them. What is important here, first of all, is the expediency of creating a SINGLE IMAGE for all of us – the image of our Country (I emphasize – not the state, but the Country). Our strength today lies in our openness, which allows us to hope for the spiritual and intellectual potential of all mankind, while the enemy is forced to hide his cards. The ideological idea born when creating an image is the only thing against which there is no protection. Having hooked the mind and heart, it takes root there, begins to grow and eventually CHANGES CONSCIOUSNESS. Next, the understanding of the world changes, and further along the chain, will and action are transformed. A new action eventually changes the world. This is the meaning of the phrase "the world is driven by ideas".

In the era before gunpowder, the war was fought with metal. In the era of gunpowder – by fire. In our time, the war is waged by information, because it is the only weapon in the struggle for consciousness. The soldiers of this war are directors, screenwriters, composers, writers and other workers of creative "factories". Forming an information army, they have NO IDEA about the purpose for which they are working. Roughly speaking, the army of talents is used in the dark.

A striking example: Directors and screenwriters do not put bed scenes in the plot of the film to corrupt people, that is not their goal. They want to attract an audience and make money. What problems are solved through this, the businessmen from creativity and the creators-performers do not suspect. Everyone is striving for their own little profitable goal, while actively working for someone else's. The irony of the situation is that most people cannot be told that they are working for someone else's goal; that they are destroying the foundations of traditional civilization. No, of course you can, but people will laugh. Few of the creators are able to think: why is it that everyone is moving in the same direction, without conspiring? And few of the few are willing to look for an answer. This raises a number of questions. First of all, how it is technically possible to attach a navigator to all creative people and make them move by a course which they DO NOT UNDERSTAND? How is it possible to make a person play a part in someone else's play without committing him to the script? How can a whole army of talent be used as a tool? In the second half of the twentieth century, a fundamentally "non-powerful plan to destroy traditional states" was developed within the framework of the Old System of Government, as the last stage of creating the right brain genotype and launching the "Destructive Democratism" program - an element of the "golden billion" incarnation program. For the first time in the history of mankind, manipulative technologies were used as the main offensive tool. Earlier they were also used, but only as an auxiliary tool.

In the new type of war, the emphasis was not on industrial and strategic objects, as in the classical war, but ON CONSCIOUSNESS. The ideological bombardment of consciousness has replaced the traditional worldview with a consumer one. On the basis of someone else's ideological base, a light myth about a consumer society and a dark one about a traditional one was created. After such ideological bombardments, deep cracks appeared in the state body, where various "wedges" began to be hammered – from worship of the consumer lifestyle to immorality. As a result, the structure of the country began to fall apart. NO one really UNDERSTOOD ANYTHING, because no government covered the entire scope of the situation. The processes that began were perceived as spontaneous. The Soviet creators yesterday and the liberal ones today DID NOT HAVE the goal of creating a consumer society, however, they created it.

People who grew up on their books and films became atheists and "believing materialists," not from eating sausage, but from using information.

What quality the products were, the people who consumed them became of such quality. It's funny to see how the aged creators complain: the new generation offends us. The comicality of the situation is that THEY THEMSELVES, at one time, with their creativity, imposed on people the model of behavior that they are dissatisfied with today. Creative people sincerely do not understand that they spat into the well. Now it's time to the drink water, and they wince... It seemed to the creators that they were just creating, writing books, making films, composing songs, through which they express themselves. Human themes about love, meanness, honor and so on were raised. Some dreamed of making society better, others just chased fame and money. But all of them, against their will, sewed strokes into the fabric of their works, forming a second-plan picture, FORMING the SUBCONSCIOUS. The Soviet and liberal systems created creators so that they would inspire society with a materialistic understanding of the world and destroy the religious one.

When trying to create an army from the existing so-called "creators" of today, there is a danger of getting a wolf in sheep's clothing. Moreover, the wolf himself will not understand who he is. It can be assumed that he will conscientiously undertake the creation of the ordered product, but he will NOT GO anywhere from his subconscious. Not being a Christian, for example, he paints his product with paints that, in his opinion, are Christian. As a result, you will get a cheap format that works NOT FOR the IDEA, but against it. Although outwardly everything will be beautiful, there is nothing to complain about. Plus, he will stuff him with materialistic and consumer attitudes, which he will NOT SEE himself, but which will slip into the subconscious of society like another snake. All hope today is for those creators who are able to control their creativity. Due to their imputed intelligence or the traditional subconscious developing only through their efforts, they already understand or feel today: there is no "just entertainment". Any information carries bookmarks, from which the concept of norm is born. Behavior and action depend on what the norms and the scale of values will be. This forms the world. It is such creators who will "blow up" the consumer understanding of the world with their products, because they are thinkers who UNDERSTAND the SCOPE of the topic being raised and are able to shift this volume into an emotional format.

A system can only be confronted by a system. An information army can be opposed by another information army. If the enemy has an army of creators, only an army of creators can oppose it. Individual geniuses are NOT QUOTED today, for many reasons. First, they do not form a shaft of production comparable to that of the "army". Second, everyone acts to the MEASURE OF THEIR UNDERSTANDING, whereas the Army "works" in a rigid corridor. Can such an "army" be created now? THE ANSWER IS UNEQUIVOCAL - YES. Despite the fact that society is saturated with consumerism, there are remnants of the traditional worldview in every person, including the human creator, who takes responsibility today, in this most difficult business - the business of awakening people! And there are even products based on traditional values. It is another matter that it was purposefully ignored, and the perky "cuckoos" opportunists pushed the traditionalists out of all spheres of activity. The time has come to squeeze the "cuckoos" out thoroughly. And instead of the soap-porn-bloody "cheapies" imposed on us, we should GIVE PEOPLE a quality product that carries love, kindness and a sense of pride in the work of human hands. Explain to people that the POWER of the MEANING of LIFE lies in its foundation, which is the strongest feeling bestowed upon man - love. Love plays the role of the foundation upon which the text of the meaning of life is "embroidered. Love here is a WANTING to do good to another PERSON as to oneself.

In Paul's<sup>1</sup> first letter to the Corinthians there are some very important words: "If I have the gift of prophecy, and know all mysteries, and have all knowledge and all faith, so I can move mountains, but if I do not have love, I am nothing. It would seem simple. However, love for so many people, is unattainable dream. With all the seeming simplicity of the question, St. Paul lists 16 conditions of love which are difficult to fulfill at the same time: "love suffers long and is kind; love does not envy; love does not boast, is not proud, is not rude; does not seek its own; is not angry; thinks no evil; does not rejoice in iniquity, but rejoices in truth; covers everything, believes everything, hopes for everything, endures everything..."

One of the conclusions from the Message is that once evil is conceived, love turns into hatred, and the meaning of life is destroyed due to the lack of a solid foundation. Meaning is a product of thinking designed to bring all human resources into an orderly, error-free movement in order to minimize their losses and maximize their success. This is the MOST EXPENSIVE PRODUCT known to mankind. Meaning creates the closest possible approximation to the truth. The meaning is similar to the voltage in the electrical network: there is a voltage – and values become necessary, like an electric circuit, and a goal, like an electric current drive's motors. Meaning sets masses of people in motion. The meaning is embodied in people who are educated and brought up in a SPECIAL WAY to anticipate and apply any changes that may occur in the world. It is people who are the authors, the bearers of meaning. Meaning is the most powerful experience of a person, which lifts him into Space, lets him into an invisible, inaudible, intangible microcosm. For the sake of meaning, man and nations go to the scaffold. THERE IS NO POINT – EVERYTHING STOPS. Betrayal, theft, dishonesty always feasts in the house from which meaning has gone. Meaning is directly "woven" into the purpose of life and cannot be separated from it. Speaking about the purpose of life, it is important not to lose sight of the fact that we are talking about an extremely complex phenomenon called "goal formation".

In today's realities, goal formation is understood as the process of GENERATING NEW GOALS in human activity. In order to choose a goal of life in the ocean of temptations, dangers and opportunities, a person must be able to perform four operations: 1 – to carry out goal-setting (it is possible to accurately determine your place in society and the place that seems desirable to you), 2 – to determine your purposefulness, the image of the future (to choose the direction of your development, transition from an unsatisfactory state to a desired state), satisfactory, 3 – to act purposefully (to continue to pursue the same goal, changing your behavior when external conditions change), 4 – to be expedient (to solve the problem of the time of one's life, bearing in mind that it consists of three varieties of forms of inference (mode) – consistency, coexistence and stability.

<sup>1</sup> Paul, commonly known as the Apostle Paul and Saint Paul, was a Christian apostle who spread the teachings of Jesus to the first century world.

The "sequence of time" is the linear order of the flow of processes as an infinite "arrow of time", directed from the past to the future. The "coexistence of time" is a SET of EVENTS in the life of a particular person that occur simultaneously. The "stability of time" is represented as the productivity of each moment, its importance in the overall balance of life time. If we assume that sequence is "length", coexistence is "width", then stability is the "height" of time. Guyot<sup>2</sup>, at one time wrote that "... time would close access to a being who does not want anything, does not strive for anything. The future is not what is coming to us, but what we are going to". The boredom that occurs today in people everywhere is a stoppage of life time, and nothing more. But it can be overcome if THERE is A GOAL that you want to achieve. The goal is an apparatus for translating meaning from a static state into a dynamic one through values. The absence of a goal makes a person, a city, a country a victim of circumstances, arbitrariness, chance. The goal, like a burning light bulb, allows you to judge the presence of values (chain and meaning (voltage)). These values "glow," "rotate," "give warmth". They are seen and heard, paid for and thanked. The goal, like the current in a light bulb, is obvious, real, effective. But the meaning of the goal is always hidden from the eyes, like tension. The goal cannot be invented in isolation from the meaning and values, the values of life. Scientists were given a limited opportunity to study values, and this played a role in the development of people, but nevertheless, some of them, by virtue of their capabilities, did NOT ALLOW society to forget about the priority of values over all other factors of human behavior. When describing the values of, for example, Petersburgers, it is most useful to apply the thoughts about the essence of the values of S. L. Rubinstein<sup>3</sup>. He wrote that: "values and ideals are directly related to culture, embodied in its products. The products of culture are presented as "reservoirs" into which a person throughout history puts off, preserving all the best. Humanity is a SET of PEOPLE connected by the products of culture, their activities, each of which makes sense only in interaction." In my opinion, it is impossible to disagree with him, even though it was said at the beginning of the twentieth century. In order to overcome the simplified idea of the essence of "instrumental" and "terminal" values, it is necessary to recall examples from (is) torii: in the length of time (from (is) torically) there is a change in ideals: the ethics of the Stoics assumed the wisdom of self-control, the Stoics and Spinoza glorified the ideal of the sage.

<sup>2</sup> Jean-Marie Guyot (1854-1888), French philosopher and poet. His main works are: "Morality without debt and sanctions," "Problems of modern Aesthetics" and "Lack of Faith in the future". The basis of morality from the point of view of Guyot is not an egoistic calculation and not an abstract consciousness of duty, but the desire for the fullest and widest possible development of vital activity.

<sup>3</sup> Sergey Leonidovich Rubinstein was a Soviet psychologist and philosopher, the founder of the Marxist tradition in Soviet psychology. The initiator of a distinct tradition of the "activity approach" in Soviet and then world psychology.

The Greek concept of love (eros) acts as the desire of the lower for the higher, more perfect. The Augustinian (and Spinoza's) representation of the translation of meaning from a static state into a dynamic one through values. Christianity (Leo Tolstoy) assumed the ideal of love for holiness (saints and penitents). Nietzsche preached the love of superman, the heroic enthusiasm of Giordano Bruno turned out to be a model of Renaissance ideals. Puritanism made a virtue of "dryness," callousness and ruthlessness towards people (Calvin), considering the power of passion a source of grave sins. It is not difficult to notice that the ESSENCE of the VALUES of LIFE is something else, much more sublime than what we know, for example, according to the so-called sociological surveys. It is useful to focus on some postulates when discussing values. In other words, there are NO values outside of the relationship to another person. In addition, value is in its pure, concentrated form — the joy of being. Joy is not from one or the other, but joy in general — joy from the VERY FACT of its existence. And I also want to remind you that values are not primary. Value is the significance of something in the world for a person. Values primarily include an ideal — an idea, the content of which expresses something significant for a person. Here it is appropriate to recall the categories of "scope," "range of life," its "intensity" and "depth," "spiritual generosity" of the personality itself. In other words, in the absence of a vivid manifestation of these parameters, it is NOT ENTIRELY TRUE to talk about the presence of values in a person.

Physiologically, a person is always able and ready to perform acts, actions, but does not do it only because of the lack of meaning, value and purpose in them. At one time, Nikolai Levashov explained to me in our private conversations that mentality is something like the level of excitement that researchers of higher nervous activity register. These are OBSERVABLE MANIFESTATIONS of LIFE. In exactly the same way, today's sociologists act, who believe that they know more about mentality than anyone else. In physiology, these VITAL MANIFESTATIONS produce: mobility of the nervous system (analog of meaning), continuity of the nervous process (analog of purpose), balance of the nervous system (analog of values) and strength of the nervous system (analog of vitality). Such a free interpretation of the physiology of higher nervous activity was needed to explain that a person at all levels — biological, physiological, psychological, social, political — HAS SUFFICIENT POWER only if this power is based on a meaningful system. There are many examples when people deprived of the ability to move, see, hear have reached the heights of wisdom, influence and recognition. And there are even more examples of the fact that with absolute physical perfection, people have passed their life path as nonentities, indulging in drunkenness and debauchery, having lived a life as a burden to their loved ones and society. It means that the BASIS of the LIFE FORCE is not muscle strength and vigilance of the eyes, but a mentality that represents a meaningful system. A meaningful mentality triggers the volitional mechanism of human behavior. A meaningless mentality replaces the will with stubbornness and whims, which eventually lead to a fear of life and an inner conviction of its worthlessness. MANY YEARS AGO L.N. Tolstoy anticipated the problems of globalization by describing the fear of life. It is for this purpose that he introduces the character of Pierre Bezukhov into War and Peace.

Among other things, he describes the mental state and thoughts of Pierre Bezukhov, who, after the matchmaking of Andrei Bolkonsky to Natasha Rostova, fell into depression. "... Sometimes Pierre recalled a story he had heard about how in war soldiers, when under fire, when they have nothing to do, diligently find something to do in order to endure danger. And to Pierre, all people seemed to be such soldiers FLEEING FROM LIFE: some by ambition, some by cards, some by writing laws, some by women, some by toys, some by politics, some by hunting, some by wine, some by state affairs. There is nothing insignificant or important, it's all the same; if only I could escape from it, as I know how! "If only I didn't see her, this terrible her".<sup>4</sup>

Long before Leo Tolstoy, B. Pascal wrote about the problem of fear of life: "I do not know who created me, nor what this world is, nor what it is I am. I am in terrible ignorance, ignorance of all things; I do not know what my life is, what my feelings are, what my soul is – the very part of me that thinks what I say, that thinks about everything and about itself and knows itself no better than everything else. I see these terrible spaces of the universe enveloping me, and I see myself bound in one corner of THIS IMMEASURABLE INFINITY and I do not know why I am in this place and not in another and why that period of time, which is called life, is tied to this, and not to another point of eternity, which I preceded and which will be after me. I see only infinities around me, which cover me, I am like a shadow that lasts for a moment and does not return".<sup>5</sup>

And more recently, thirty years ago, an outstanding researcher of Globalization, A. Toffler<sup>6</sup> explained the emergence of fear of the Future: "Under the influence of new experiences and sensations, a mentally healthy person ceases to distinguish the real from the artificial. The ground goes out from under his feet, because the very definition of a normal psyche, a normal life ceases to be considered normal. The flow of changes brings unprecedented complications in the lives of people who become victims of future-shock. In the future, a person is waiting for a world in which there is NOTHING in COMMON with the world to which he is accustomed. If only one technique had gone off the chain, then our situation would have been quite difficult.

<sup>6</sup> Alvin Toffler was an American writer, futurist and businessman, known for his work on modern technologies, including the digital revolution and the communication revolution, with an emphasis on their impact on cultures around the world. He is considered one of the outstanding futurists of the world.

This quote fully describes the current state of many (most) people, the state caused by the processes of the New Management System and, most importantly, NOT UNDERSTANDING these processes (not understanding what is happening), because people are trying to comprehend TODAY'S REALITY with the help of outdated, but familiar concepts for them, and this leads some to constant fear, others (most) – into a state of indifference to what is happening around them, to apathy. Apathy is underestimated by others as a kind of easily banished idler's bliss. Or as laziness, which DOES NOT pose a danger to anyone except close people. But this is an erroneous conclusion, and it is in our time. Because apathy is both a STATE PROBLEM and a SIGN of human DISEASE. When the masses of people fall into apathy, then the country falls into apathy, then it falls out of the global process of global changes, leaving the world from the (is)toric arena. Apathy, translated from Greek — "dispassion", i.e., a state characterized by emotional passivity, indifference, flattening of feelings, indifference to the events of the surrounding reality and weakening of motives and interests. Many philologists define apathy as dispassion, insensibility, indifference, vacancy, aloofness, equanimity, coldness, disgust, inertia, lethargy, laziness, "oblomovism". A. I. Yuryev<sup>7</sup> pointed out the danger of apathy for society. He associated it with anomie to explain DEVIANT BEHAVIOR (suicide, apathy and frustration). With a rather abrupt change in social ideals and morals, certain social groups cease to feel their involvement in this society, their alienation occurs, new social norms and values are rejected by members of these groups, including socially declared patterns of behavior, and instead of conventional means of achieving individual or social goals, their own (in particular, illegal ones) are put forward. BUT IN REALITY, ALL THE ABOVE is the process of "working out" a specific brain genotype and selecting "unnecessary material," followed by its removal (up to physical) from the software processes associated with it.

In our life today, we are constantly balancing between grief and boredom. Boredom mistakenly refers to a household problem. Very few people today, in rare messages on the Internet, report their attention to this phenomenon. They write that this mistake was pointed out by Schopenhauer, who claimed that experts believe that happiness, apparently, is located somewhere in the middle: so that the sharpness of new impressions does NOT BEGIN to bring unbearable pain, and at the same time, so that boredom does NOT JAM to death.

<sup>7</sup> Alexander Ivanovich Yuryev (6 October, 1942 - 26 November, 2022) was a Soviet and Russian psychologist. The creator of the scientific direction of political psychology in the USSR and modern Russia. Doctor of Psychological Sciences, Professor.

It is important to understand that the deeper the grief, the longer the boredom will last. It is boredom that stops social, research, and personal processes, leading to stagnation in all areas of society. A person intuitively tries to fight boredom, which LEADS TO the DEGRADATION of his personality, into a slide to primitive and criminal forms of behavior.

The influence of boredom on a person, unfortunately, was underestimated even by such outstanding Russian psychologists as K. K. Platonov.<sup>8</sup> He defined boredom as a mental state caused by the ABSENCE of INTERESTING STIMULI and manifested in a decrease in the level of clarity of consciousness. We will be grateful to him for pointing out a "decrease in the level of clarity of consciousness". But now it is already known for sure that it is WRONG to RECOMMEND overcoming boredom with "interesting stimuli". It was this mistake of Russian scientists – psychologists in the way of overcoming boredom that determined the organization of society in the USSR, and was one of the reasons for its collapse. Nevertheless, I can say, based on my own experience, that "boredom is unusual for a person with a rich inner world". A person is complex, and besides boredom, there is also the problem of loneliness, which is so fundamental and so little known that, for example, politicians DO NOT ASSOCIATE it in any way with the results of their "political activity". The fruit of the activity of politics is the concept of social solidarity, which is understood as a state of collective ideological integration. Now in Moscow, St. Petersburg, as well as throughout Russia (approximately since 2002), social solidarity has been REPLACED by ANOMIE - a state of disorder and illegality. And this is an objective process within the framework of new Management System programs. Anomie manifested itself with rapid social and economic changes that violate the order in the social structure. The overturning of social norms and the loss of restrictions cause people to feel that they are in a space without landmarks. HAVING NO landmarks, people begin TO GET TIRED OF EXISTENCE. Their efforts become useless, life loses value, and abnormal self-destruction occurs, and loneliness is one of its components. To understand the power of the pressure of loneliness on a person, it is useful to remember your own feelings. The feelings that many of us experienced in childhood are a strong sense of loneliness and a vain hope to meet a person with whom we could talk. Nature, books, meaningful work saved from DEEP DEPRESSION.

You can trust such a subtle writer as O. de Balzac, who wrote: "A person is afraid of loneliness. And of all the types of loneliness, the loneliness of the soul is the most terrible. The hermits of antiquity lived in communion with God, they lived in the most populated world, in the spiritual world... The first need of a person, whether he is a leper or a convict, an outcast or an invalid, is to FIND A COMPANION IN FATE. Thirsting to quench this feeling, a person wastes all his strength, all his power, all the fervor of his soul. If it were not for this devouring desire, would Satan have found accomplices for himself"?

I have tried to summarize all those of without (with) peace, which most of all dominate us today. However, calmness and dissatisfaction are indispensable conditions for further progress. Progress, first of all, in development, which will allow us to create an Image ourselves. The image of our country. In the next decade, the face of the entire Planet will change so much that it will be funny for us to remember our worries today. But we SHOULD NOT forget that today, 95% of the Brain's capabilities are blocked in Humans, a division has been made into conscious (5%) and non-conscious (95%). This was done specifically to narrow the flow of perceived CONSCIOUS INFORMATION. This allowed the intruders to slowly transfer a Person (with the help of "scientific" technologies) from an analog perception of the world to a discrete one, reducing everything to binary manifestations. Now the process of reformatting the brain is intensively underway, which allows us to perceive what is happening in the realities of reality.

The image of the new Russia in today's GLOBAL CHANGING WORLD is characterized by the fact that Russia has changed the most. The country has once again become the socio-political laboratory of the world, and was the first to take on all imaginable global tests that could fall on the country. No other country as Russia, has made so many changes to itself, and has not destroyed traditional stereotypes of behavior. Today, Russia, like no other country, is open to innovations, and like no other country has the strength to adopt them. Because, finally, the main "point" in UNDERSTANDING its IMAGE has been opened, which was forcibly "closed" for many millennia and did not allow people to create a GENUINE IMAGE of RUSSIA. Russia is not a territory, it is not a country, it is not a state. RUSSIA IS A CIVILIZATION in the full understanding of this meaning. I am sure that Russia's experience will be useful to many developed countries, some of which have already embarked on the path of global trials.

Russia today resembles a person who has passed special tests, but whose return went unnoticed by others. This happens because the task of forming the image of a country that has a useful experience for the whole world is NOT SOLVED. And the task of forming an image of Russia that is understandable and useful to the world is not solved because there is no technology for this work. This, at first glance, may seem complicated and difficult for the technological execution of the creation of the image of Russia, but it is much easier than the FORMATION of the IMAGE of the COUNTRY by the creative geniuses of the Leo Tolstoy class, who are not in the country today. The main obstacle in creating an image of Russia for its own citizens and for the outside world is the simplification of the task and method to the limits when the image disappears or is distorted. The formation of the image of the country is a task either for geniuses of Dostoevsky's class, or for professionals of modern Russian science who have understood today what modern science is. But not for clerks-officials of organizations selling information who cannot understand that Russia from February 2022 and today's Russia are already completely different states. For many, it is NOT QUITE noticeable, but in a few months, it will become real evidence.

Russian culture in the near future, it will become quite obvious to EVERYONE that explaining the expediency of the existence of power, as a long-standing "historical tradition" in Russia, as the identity of the "Russian soul," as a search for a "new Russian way" and moreover, artificially implanted appeal to the negative experience of Western states - turned out not only to be ineffective, but also categorically erroneous. Russia, deservedly – undeservedly (this issue is not discussed at all) has already acquired the function of a leader, but not an imperial one in the former historic construction, but a leader who can and should lead other peoples along a DIFFERENT PATH of civilizational development, on which violence and parasitism are excluded. Global changes in the future are so large-scale that no country and no city in the world is ready to accept them. Some industries will disappear and other industries will appear. The most modern technologies will become meaningless and they will be replaced by NEW ones, UNKNOWN TODAY. Some, today, prosperous territories will become empty, while others will suffer from overpopulation. Today's virtues will become the subject of ridicule, and yesterday's "vices" will become a condition for success. All faiths will still be needed, but they will be leveled in the end. There will be no national distinction. This is becoming more and more evident today, and the border will only blur further. Everything will be "summed up" in a single 385 brain genotype. It will level out in a few generations. And it DOES NOT MATTER where a person lives, the most important thing is that he is in the ZONE of GUARANTEED LIFE SUPPORT. Then he will live normally. And what nationality he is – everyone will start to forget very soon. It is important to understand that the Motherland is a functional and territorial allotment that fully accompanies you. And not within the limited framework of some kind of financial support, political, ideological or otherwise - all this is nonsense invented by people. Life support is completely different. These are the processes of managing the life of your body – the flesh, your Brain (Soul, Essence), your Mind. These are the true elements of life support, and depending on which Complex your Life Support comes from, your Homeland is there. Today you are satisfied being in the territory where you were born and live. Everything suits you and the living conditions, and the elements of cohabitation with neighbors, friends, you have everything, and then elements of a certain "deja vu" (nostalgia) will begin (or will not begin) and you will be drawn to where the guaranteed support of the 385 genotype goes. And it will pull, mainly to Russia! And for Russia, in particular, it will NOT MATTER at ALL what nationality a person is, where he came from, whether he was in some special or not special living conditions, such does NOT matter at all. The population that integrates into the future will gather. And what language he speaks, the people, what nationality he previously considered himself to be, what skin color he has, all this does not matter – everyone, in the end, will be "equalized" as ALL THEIR EQUALS. This will be The POINT of CREATING a REAL IMAGE of RUSSIA. It is impossible to imagine such a thing now, but in the near future, what has been said will manifest itself in people's minds. You won't even notice how everything will turn into reality. Such an amazing world is being embodied before our eyes and we are all lucky that we are living in such a historic moment. Therefore, today, all over the world they talk about the need to "rediscover yourself," or "reinvent yourself," at least "to realize yourself in a new world".

One tactic is to lazily wait for developments, the other is to proactively form changes taking into account their interests. It has long been said: The future is not what is coming to us, but what we are going to.
