

Salvation of the Saviors (series 76-369) Project 369 – Protocol of the Beginning: Return to the Origin of Origins...

*Without an energy-informational lattice structured according to the parameters of the Level of Life, the realization of Meaning is impossible.
Without Meaning — there is no Mind.
And without Mind— there is no Human.*

The previous article in the “Protocol of the Beginning”¹ series concluded with a key realization: Humanity stands at the point of departure from an alien, parasitic strategy in which it has existed for the past 18,000 years. It was shown that modern civilization is NOT A NATURAL continuation of the path of Reason, rather a forced, imposed vector — one torn away from the original course of development. However, to truly understand where we must move next, it is not enough merely to renounce false reference points. A deeper step is required — a return to the Origin of Origins.

We are not speaking here of a return to a primitive past, nor of regression or nostalgia for mythical “golden ages.” Rather, this is about restoring the INFORMATIONAL FOUNDATION upon which the first scenario of Intelligent civilizational development was once built. We must understand that NOTHING THAT HAPPENED was accidental, neither the emergence of People, nor their form, nor the long preparatory phase leading to the Great Reversal. Everything took place within a programmatically controlled structure of Being, strictly synchronized with the Mind of the planet. In this article, we will delve into that EARLY STAGE — the one and a half million years of preparation that preceded the first Goal Vector. We will reveal the TRUE NATURE of the human-like being: its origin, task, and destiny, as well as the reasons why traditional scientific theories, from Darwinism to dialectical materialism, have proven not only erroneous, they are also destructive to the understanding of the Human as an energy-informational form of Life.

The reader will understand that Humans did not descend from primates. They were not created through struggle, suffering, or “labor” born of necessity. They are not a parody of nature or a mistake of evolution. Humans are a FUNCTIONAL EXECUTOR of the Reasonable Management program, and only in this capacity can they be a subject of the future, not a mere bystander of a dying system.

If in the first article we identified the main milestone — the shift in the management strategy that took place in 2021, then now, in the second, we return to the past in order to precisely, layer by layer, RECONSTRUCT THE STRUCTURE of forgotten Knowledge. This is necessary not for the sake of history, rather for the present: to restore the Connection — between past and future, between body and Mind, between Human and the Earth itself. We are setting out to the place where the VERY

POSSIBILITY of Intelligent existence began. To the very foundation. To the moment when everything was established — and when everything can still be changed.

In the first part, we examined the three SEQUENTIAL PHASES of civilization's strategic reversal and identified the key point of our present era — humanity's transition to a new, third strategy of the Goal Vector. We demonstrated that this is not a metaphor or philosophical image, rather a CONCRETE REALITY: an energy-informational transformation marking the end of the parasitic path and the beginning of the phase of Intelligent alignment between Humanity and the program of the PLANETARY MIND. And while the previous part focused on planetary changes, we now turn to an equally important subject — humanity itself, its development, evolution, and profound preparation that unfolded over millions of years.

It may seem strange; however, the main TURNING POINT in the civilizational path — the launch of the first development strategy, which occurred about 20,000 years ago — was far from the beginning of human history. It was the result. The outcome. The culmination of a gigantic period of preparation lasting almost one and a half million years. And here a natural question arises: WHAT WAS HAPPENING during that time? Why such a long period — without apparent progress, without “civilizations” and “technologies?” The answer lies in the very essence of Intelligent development: preparation cannot be rushed. For Man to become not merely flesh, rather a bearer of the functions of Reason, it was first necessary to lay the foundation — structural, energetic, and informational.

This stage was not “prehistory” but a necessary foundation. During those one and a half million years, what could be called the EXECUTIVE THRESHOLD unfolded. Under the guidance of the planetary Mind, the brain was purposefully formed as a structure capable of later acquiring a new quality — thinking that was not reflexive or animal, rather controllable, creative, and conscious. Not through blind natural selection, rather through the embedding of energy-informational grids — peculiar programmatic matrices, “MODULES OF CONSCIOUSNESS,” formed externally as ready-made constructs. These created the inner foundation from which the capacity for Intelligent orientation would later arise. Thus, at a certain point, a twin leap occurred — a double event without which the civilizational turning point would have been impossible: first — the formation of the brain's energy-informational base; second — the launch of the first strategic Goal Vector, when man for the first time gained the ability to engage in Intelligent governance. This is not a myth rather the BEGINNING OF BEGINNINGS, the conscious moment when Man became not merely a form of life, rather an active functional node within the System of the planetary Mind. From this moment began the true history of human purpose.

Yes, this stage lasted only about two thousand years. Yes, it was forcibly interrupted. However, the main point is — IT EXISTED. This means that the concept of harmonious human participation in the development of life on the planet is not a utopia, rather it is a confirmed fact. Moreover, understanding this stage allows us to view the present in a completely different light. Today's reality is the result of a hijacked evolution, a distorted vector, a lost proportionality. Yet if we realize that it all began differently, and that the current path is not the only one — rather it is a forced, imposed trajectory — then we regain the power of choice. The return to the true vector BECOMES POSSIBLE. That is why it is so important to understand that humanity existed long before the known history began. About 1.5 million years ago, a being emerged on Earth possessing external features similar to the modern Human. It was not an “ape,” not an intermediate link — it was a HUMANLIKE BEING, created within a managed project of shaping a functional form of living matter. It did not “evolve” from anything — it was introduced, integrated into the planetary process of formation. This fact, denied and ignored by academic science, is the key to understanding both the past and the future. This is not an abstract conclusion but a reconstruction of existence based on NEW KNOWLEDGE revealed through the works of Russian scientists — those who gave us the tools to move beyond dogmatic thinking. Only by recognizing the magnitude of the preparation can we comprehend the scale of the task. Only through a return to the origin does forward motion become possible. Naturally, such a majestic phenomenon as the appearance of the HUMANLIKE BEING — a complete, unified, and highly organized form of living matter — could not have been accidental or spontaneous. It was neither a product of natural chance nor the result of some “magical” chemical evolution. There was no “natural synthesis,” as evolutionary biology continues to claim in its simplified theories that reject the very notion of ENERGY-INFORMATIONAL MANAGEMENT. Everything that occurred at this stage was the outcome of a strictly controlled, precisely calibrated vector leading to the programmed manifestation of Man as a FUNCTIONAL ELEMENT of the planetary Mind.

The appearance of the humanlike species became the culmination of an ancient scenario that had been unfolding for billions of years. It was NOT A PROCESS in the Darwinian sense, rather a STAGED RITE of becoming, guided by the Custodial Systems of the Earth — those intelligent superstructures that had accompanied the planet since the very beginning of its PROGRAMMED EVOLUTION. Every phase of this path, from the first non-nuclear cells in mineral waters to complex, perceptive life forms, underwent energetic, informational, and functional testing. Only those biological constructions that met the highest standards of coherence with the program of Intelligent unfolding were granted the right to exist. This WAS NOT a path of trial and error — it was a path of sacred selection: refined, directed, and collective.

Within this context, it becomes evident that the appearance of the humanlike being WAS NOT the final spark of a random mutation. It was a programmatic act of embodiment, in which flesh became the vessel of the Mind, and form the receptacle of control functions. This approach is not a metaphor. It is the foundation of a NEW VISION, created by an integral system of knowledge that unites the biological, energetic, informational, and ecological into a single field of understanding the emergence of Man as a meaningful part of the planetary Mind.

Living matter itself has been perfected over billions of years. It took more than 2.5 billion years of precise, controlled tuning for the very structure of the seed to reach an acceptable level of energetic, informational, and morpho-functional maturity. And this perfection has NOT STOPPED: it continues to this day, evolving in parallel with the Earth itself and with the increasing complexity of its internal control Systems. The appearance of primates, no matter how hard Darwinian thought tries to claim otherwise, was merely a secondary phenomenon, secondary, having neither logical nor constructive kinship with Man.

To compare the humanlike being with an ape is like claiming that a bus evolved from a watermill simply because both have round wheels. The presence of a shared feature is NOT EVIDENCE of origin. The humanlike being was not the result of a biological mutation, rather the culmination of long-term work of Intelligent Support Systems operating according to SUPER-PLANETARY ALGORITHMS. These Systems not only controlled the evolution of living matter but also perfected themselves, progressing from the simplest levels of biospheric support to the most complex models of NEUROINFORMATIONAL CREATION, resulting in a unified form of flesh — humanlike, capable of energy-informational reception of external control signals. That was the moment of genesis — not merely of life, rather of intelligent coexistence. It was then that Man began to take shape as a potential bearer of the functions of civilizational management. His flesh — even then — differed from that of animals in form but also in internal structure and in the potential to contain consciousness built upon a different frequency-wave foundation. Here we approach the boundary still unacknowledged by science yet long present in the knowledge that has been ignored — because it leads thought beyond the limits of materialistic models. However, without acknowledging this boundary, it is impossible to move forward. It is impossible to understand who Man was if we continue to regard him as a random outcome of terrestrial processes. He is NOT A PRODUCT of evolution. He is a programmatic carrier of functions. His appearance was a rite in which flesh for the first time became the vessel of the Mind.

To compare the distant humanlike beings with modern humans by such traits as skull shape, limb length, height, or the slant of the eyes is like comparing the geometric form of a vessel to the light contained within it. What matters is not the external — rather the inner essence. Not in the sense of organs and tissues, rather in the sense of the deep informational-energetic architecture that determines whether a given carrier can participate in the Intelligent process, whether it can become an element of governance — NOT MERELY survive, rather transform reality in harmony with the planet's program. Yes, the typological features may have been different. However, there was never a goal to standardize them. The very essence of human development was NEVER BIOMETRIC. His purpose is not to conform to anthropometric or aesthetic clichés. What matters is not how he looked, rather how he WAS STRUCTURED on a deep level. Here lies the key distinction between the true Human — as a functional node of Intelligent unfolding — and all other forms of biological matter. This difference manifests itself in three fundamental aspects: 1. The structural perfection of the brain. The brain of the humanlike being was NOT MERELY a complex biological organ. It was an energy-informational platform — a “perceptual grid” capable of receiving, filtering, synthesizing, and accumulating external control knowledge. It WAS A SYSTEM oriented not only toward internal regulation of the organism but toward participation in higher processes — in the scheme of planetary governance, in accordance with the Mind of the Earth itself. 2. Functional participation in Reasonable orientation. Humans were not created to adapt to nature, rather to be its HARMONIOUS CONTINUATION. Their task was not mere survival, rather it was integration into the governing process. The ability to join planetary development programs, to sense and shape the vector of change, to be an active, thinking unit within a greater system — this is what distinguished them from all other forms of life. 3. The dynamics of survival as a manifestation of Reason. Survival — not as instinct, rather as a CONSCIOUS ABILITY to foresee, to restructure, to adapt the environment to oneself and oneself to the environment. Not to evade threats, rather to anticipate them. Not to submit to external conditions, rather to participate in their correction. This is an ability that is impossible for primates, as well as for any other biological forms that DO NOT POSSESS Intelligent inclusion in the planet's governing streams. By these parameters, primates never were, are not, and will not be a form capable of civilizational participation. They are another branch. Another code. Another role in the balance of life. This makes the Darwinian assumption — that man descended from the ape — NOT MERELY false, rather destructively naïve. It not only diminishes the grandeur of Man; it distorts the very understanding of purpose.

A legitimate question arises: if primates are not our ancestors, and if there was no biological “self-organization,” then how did such a complex, multilayered, and perfected phenomenon as the form of the humanlike being come into existence? The answer lies beyond the bounds of scientific “experience” yet within the realm of programmatic reality: Man did not emerge — he was embodied. His design was not born of mutation — it was introduced as a model. His flesh was not the outcome of chance, rather the result of the precise harmonization of ALL PARAMETERS — physical, energetic, climatic, geomagnetic, biological, informational. Only within such an environment — defined by temperature, gravity, frequency, and light — could the form we now call proto-human be realized. What may seem to a naïve eye as a “primitive” form of ancient man was in fact a PERFECT INSTRUMENT of interaction with the world of that epoch. This structure corresponded to the Earth’s then-current state — the composition of its atmosphere, the structure of photon flows, the properties of water and land environments, the geomagnetic contours, and the energetic density of space. The parameters were ideal — not in the sense of maximum capacity, rather as a point of perfect correspondence between life’s form and its environment. For this reason, Humans not only survived, they became the CENTRAL NODE of control, integrated into the structure of the planet’s Mind. Humans became a link — between the external world and the higher levels of unfolding, between earthly matter and the energy-informational framework of the Cosmos. From that moment on, They ceased to be merely an organism. They became a function. A bridge. A vessel. Humans became the possibility of the future. Each of the parameters described above — whether climatic features, geophysical activity, atmospheric composition, or the configurations of the planet’s energy-informational field — DID NOT MERELY influence the development of the humanlike species. They created a coherent complex of conditions in which the very possibility of embodying an Intelligent form of life BECAME REALIZABLE. Yet these influences acted not in isolation, rather in a unified, interwoven pattern — as facets of a single volumetric matrix, pre-calculated, tuned, and harmonized. It was a collective influence — multiple in form, yet singular in essence. Such an approach allows us to SEE THE PAST not as a series of biological accidents, rather as a guided process — step by step leading living matter toward a definite goal: the emergence of Man as an element of the planet’s systemic Mind. However, for now, we merely outline these foundational directions. Their detailed exploration — including the transformation of physiology, the evolution of energetic shells, the “maturation” of the brain and its functional grids — demands a separate, MULTIFACETED ANALYSIS. What is essential at this stage is to fix the central idea: the early form of humankind, despite its apparent “simplicity,” was not deficient. It was a starting point. This was a necessary programmatic state of the Beginning of Beginnings — when living matter first entered the phase of its directed assembly and attunement.

Perfection DOES NOT ARISE instantaneously. It does not descend “from above” as a gift — it is formed through process. Through a process in which every generation becomes the bearer of new tasks, new challenges, and new parameters of participation in the collective REASONABLE UNFOLDING. Where life carves a person from the primal foundation as a sculptor shapes from stone — strike by strike, facet by facet; where perfection is not granted, rather built through tension, overcoming, and inner struggle between instinct and consciousness, between chaos and order. That is why no stage of the one-and-a-half-million-year preparatory period can be called “empty” or “primitive.” It was an intense labor of the Systems of Reason — forming, testing, and consolidating the structures that would later allow Man to become an EXECUTIVE ELEMENT of planetary governance. This path could not have been brief; it required precise sequence: first — the tuning of physiology, then — the architecture of the brain, afterward — the energy-informational alignment with planetary programs, and only in the final stage — the emergence of the ability to perceive REASONABLE ORIENTATION. Without this chain, it would have been impossible to instill in Humans even the simplest notion of responsibility — let alone the higher mission of participation in the cosmic scenario.

Modern science, in its institutional form, still clings to the fragments of nineteenth-century theories. Iz(s)tory — as a COMPOSED LEGEND. Biology — as a collection of accidents. Anthropology — as an archaeological fantasy. All of this is built on the INERTIA OF THINKING, severed from the understanding of life itself as an energy-informational process. In essence, it is the mindset of a pathologist: to observe, record, and classify what has already occurred, without connection to what continues to live, evolve, and change in real time. However, we now stand on the other side of that way of thinking. We are not interested in what the ancient human “looked like.” We are interested in WHY HE APPEARED. We are not concerned with the length of the femur; we care about what functions he carried and within what program he developed. We are not satisfied with the question “where did he come from” — we are concerned with why he was assembled.

It is precisely at this level of understanding that we step out of the state of illusion. We no longer repeat theories that have failed the test of time. We no longer rely on hypotheses that explain Man through random mutations. We view him as a CONSCIOUS PROJECT — designed within the framework of interaction with the planetary Mind, formed over millions of years, and now approaching the moment of its unfolding. This is not an “alternative history” — it is a new scenario of cognition. It is a different reality in which Man is NOT A CONSEQUENCE, rather a beginning. Not an animal rising from all fours, rather a functional node of a great system. Not the crown of nature, its co-participant and executor. Yet to fully grasp why the concept of the programmatic origin of Humans is so vital for the new strategy of development, we must confront the version that still dominates the academic world — despite its internal inconsistency. According to it, humanlike beings evolved from primates, SLOWLY ADVANCING from Homo habilis to Homo erectus, and then to Homo sapiens. At first glance, it seems simple — a linear progression. However, even the proponents of this hypothesis cannot agree on how exactly this transition occurred. The number of competing interpretations grows with each decade — which means there is NO TRUTH behind them. There are only assumptions, dogmas, and schematic models — yet no integral, evidence-based understanding.

Let us look more closely at the essence of this “teaching.” According to it, the ancient creature struggled for ages in the battle for survival. It crawled through dangers, hunger, and cold, began to socialize, uttered sounds, tried to form groups, discovered fire, lifted a stick... And then — after millions of years — suddenly became Human. Exactly so, “suddenly,” for NO ONE CAN explain the very moment of that transition. What exactly happened? Did the primate pick up a stick and suddenly realize its mission? Or did it light a fire and immediately issue a declaration of human rights? In this philosophical fable, the stick is, strangely enough, given a kind of magical meaning — as if it were the apple of Eden — only now not biblical but “scientific.” The creature reached for a banana, stumbled, found a stick, sat down to rest — and there it was, the mutation, the miracle, the dawn of consciousness. The stick MADE HIM sapiens. If that were truly the case, we might as well hand out sticks to the inhabitants of the most oppressed regions of the planet and wait for a civilizational explosion to begin. But, alas, a stick is not an algorithm. A stone is not a code. And certainly NOT THE MIND. No matter how figurative this idea may seem, it reflects the same thing: an attempt to explain the greatest phenomenon — Humanity — through the primitive, through an external object, through a mechanism devoid of meaning. For it is NOT THE TOOL that gives rise to thought — it is thought that gives rise to the tool.

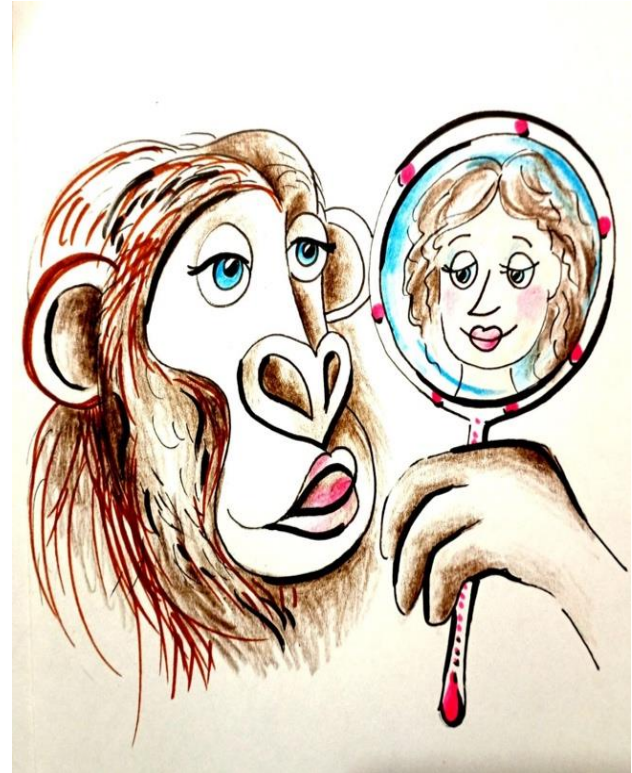

This substitution is the root of the deepest delusion. In it, everything is turned upside down. For in truth, Man did not grow out of struggle, did not crawl from mud to nobility, did not become “the best of apes.” He was PURPOSEFULLY FORMED — not by evolution, rather by a Program; not by adaptation, rather by design. He is not the result — HE IS THE START. He is not an animal that “learned to think,” rather the outcome of Intelligent engineering, pre-inscribed into the logic of the planet’s civilizational course. Then why have primates not become intelligent beings over the last ten thousand years? Why have they not entered an age of discoveries, uncovered laws, convened congresses, or become subjects of political life? Why, despite global change, despite simulations, experiments, and contact with humans, has not a single primate awakened Reason within itself? The answer is simple: because they are NOT DESIGNED for that. Their lines do not lead toward Reason. They are closed loops. They are not included in the Program. Everything that still clings to this “theory” — the stick, the stone, the fire — should long ago have vanished into oblivion. Yet it still lives on, nourished by inertia, by fear of the unknown, by fear of admitting that development is not struggle, it is governance; that life is not an accident rather part of a great Scenario; that Man is not a by-product of the forests, rather he is a FUNCTIONAL UNIT of the planet’s Mind. Not a consumer, rather a custodian; not a survivor, rather a co-participant.

No matter how hard the Darwinists try to repeat their outdated incantations — science has already moved beyond their dogmas. The FORMER PARADIGM is crumbling like dust. It has given us neither methodology, nor practice, nor understanding of the essence of Reason. It has only kept Man trapped in the illusion of his own origin, preventing him from recognizing his true purpose.

It is time to admit: the concept that was hammered into millions of minds as “the foundation of biological development” HAS PROVEN FALSE. The ideology masquerading as science has collapsed. And now — in the era of transition to the Third Strategy of the Civilizational Goal Vector — Humanity must emerge from this illusion, leave behind the museum of obsolete views, and enter its true iz(s)tory — as a project of the Mind, as a system of conscious participation, as a being capable not only of remembering, rather of understanding why it was assembled.

The conclusion, as they say, is clear and final: DARWINISM HAS FAILED. It never completed the path from hypothesis to theory, never became truth, and never managed to explain the true nature of Humanity. Even if its foundation were washed with hyssop² — the ancient herb of purification — its essence would remain the same: a concept built on a FALSE

PREMISE, ideological fanaticism, and an illusion convenient for a particular era. Neither stick, nor stone, nor labor became the cause of Humanity’s emergence, for that transition never occurred. There was no passage from primate to thinking being, because there never was — and could not be — an original chain linking these forms into a single evolutionary line. All of it is a fabrication, formalized into a postulate that was MEANT to serve as the cornerstone of an entire materialistic civilization. And that is precisely why it was believed so passionately. For more than a century and a half, ideologized science cultivated this myth with obsessive persistence: it was taught, rewritten, illustrated, painted on posters, turned into textbooks and lectures. With reverent zeal, the image of the “primitive man” was recreated — always with the same stick, the same stone, and the same primitive labor. This naive misconception became not just a scientific error, but the CORNERSTONE of consciousness programming: convenient, because it supposedly explained everything. After all, if Man is simply a “monkey with a stick,” then he is easy to control. One need only build the right system of “labor education,” and “civilization” is guaranteed. Thus, the postulate “Labor made man out of an ape” entered common usage. Not as a scientific assertion, rather as a dogma, replacing a holistic understanding of the Mind. In reality, this wasn't a scientific formula, rather an ideological fixation on a convenient picture of the world — utilitarian, mechanistic, simplified to the POINT OF ABSURDITY. A picture in which reason became a side effect of pain and hunger, and the meaning of existence was reduced to survival. However, now it's clear: this entire conceptual system is falling apart. Just as the civilizational model that gave birth to it has crumbled.

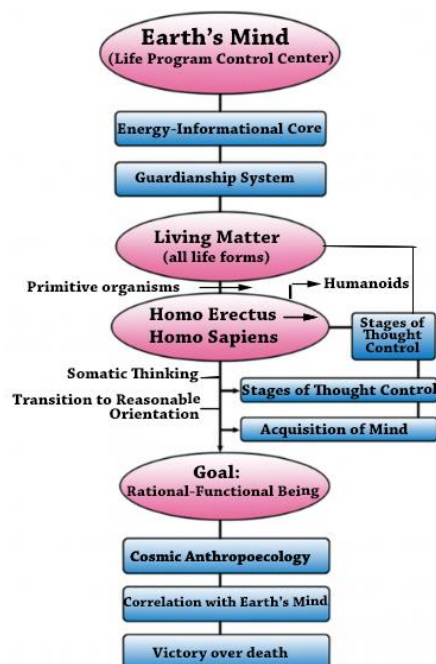

² This plant can be called continental: it is precisely in the Psalms that David says, “Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.” (Psalm 51:7)

The “eternal” science, established by administrative decree, is gone. Along with it has VANISHED THE FAITH in its leaders, its hegemony, its monopoly on truth. And if anything proved truly destructive in the twentieth century, it was not the political revolutions — rather the violence committed against knowledge itself. Ideologically guided, programmatically enforced rape of logic, of facts, of meaning. It was not merely an error of thinking — it was the renunciation of Understanding in favor of programming. An entire century, in essence, was devoted to the SUPPRESSION OF THE MIND under the guise of its enlightenment. Now, however, we live in an entirely different time.

It is time to cast off the anchors of the past. The atavisms of philosophical materialism, the illusions that chance could ever serve as a form of governance, that Reason could emerge from struggle — must forever be removed from humanity’s conceptual field. Our logic now turns toward the genuine: toward the search for GOVERNING CAUSES, toward a return to the Program. And everything that occurred before the moment of the first strategy of Reasonable orientation WAS NOT a “pre-Soviet antiquity,” not chaos, not a chain of accidents. It was a deliberate path — a precise, step-by-step realization of the program designed for the preparation of Humanity. Which means that from here — everything is only beginning. We stand at the very edge of a new truth, where questions once forbidden become possible, where answers appear that no longer fit the academic templates, where the Mind claims its central role — not as consequence, rather AS CAUSE; not as a by-product of matter, rather as its primal foundation. And it is there, into the depths of the governing architecture of Being, that we now direct our gaze. For everything that is not inscribed within the new Goal Vector — dies; and everything that aligns with it — ascends. And Humanity, as the bearer of the meaning created from the beginning, NO LONGER NEEDS a stick. The program of the Mind is open to It.

It is especially important — and imperative — that we cleanse our minds from all former hypotheses that ascribed to Humanity an allegedly innate AGGRESSIVE HEGEMONY over the surrounding natural world. This idea, institutionalized in the schools of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries as “scientific,” was in truth NOTHING MORE than a philosophically fabricated instrument for justifying destructive activity, legitimized within the framework of materialistic paradigms. Its TRUE FUNCTION was not to explain the origin of Man, rather to serve a parasitic civilizational program: one aimed at exploitation, domination, and destruction — both of nature and of the human essence itself. Such concepts became an intellectual screen concealing the nature of ALIEN BEHAVIOR implanted into the fabric of civilization from the outside. And if we are to seek truth, it must be stated plainly: neither the early humanlike forms nor Man himself — as the energy-informational hypostasis of the Mind — ever possessed, nor could they have possessed, an innate drive toward violence, war, or exploitation. The so-called “struggle for survival,” presented as a “natural law,” is in fact the consequence of intrusion, not the cause of development.

This key point CANNOT BE IGNORED. The aggressive hegemony long promoted as an innate trait of “human nature” is in fact the result of a powerful energy-informational intervention that occurred about 18,000 years ago. It was then, as previously described, that the Parasitic EBR Control System was introduced. With its emergence on the Planet, a new behavioral model took hold — suppression, hierarchy, control. These norms were not the product of natural selection, rather a DIRECT IMPUTATION, structurally enforced through the distortion of the Earth's energy-informational field. All living systems — including the evolving Human — became immersed in an artificially created matrix in which aggression, consumerism, and struggle were established as the standards of behavior.

Up to that moment — before the external intervention — the humanlike beings developed within the framework of harmony. They DID NOT STRUGGLE against nature — they were part of its conscious structure. Their life was accompanied by the constant guiding care of the planet, expressed through the work of the Control Systems that oversaw every phase of living unfolding. This supervision DID NOT ALLOW arbitrariness. There was no random struggle, no instinctive domination. There was none, and there could not be. Everything unfolded according to a governing design, as part of the Great Plan. The notion that man “conquered nature,” “subdued the elements,” and “took possession of the planet” is not historical reality, rather a later projection of a DISTORTED CONSCIOUSNESS already under the rule of the parasitic code. It is an attempt to interpret the ancient world through the lens of the present, a world in which violence has been normalized, institutionalized, and embedded into law, science, religion, and philosophy. In truth, everything was different. The true foundations of human development lie not in struggle or aggression, but in subtle, precisely structured ENERGY-

INFORMATIONAL GUIDANCE. This

accompaniment was the true source from which every new stage was formed — from primary sensing to governing awareness. The Systems of the Earth DID NOT MERELY observe; they carried out programmatic supervision — initiating phases, monitoring development, fine-tuning parameters. This was not evolution in the Darwinian sense, rather a strictly directed process in which chance was excluded. No “natural selection” could have produced a form of consciousness capable of managing the evolution of an entire planet. This means the humanlike beings WERE NOT NATURE'S ACCIDENTS, rather embodied functions within the grand architecture of Being. They were created, developed, and guided — participants in a long-term civilizational project. Thus, it was not labor, survival, or struggle that drove the development of Humanity, rather accompaniment — the higher energy-informational guidance emanating from the Mind of the planet, directed toward the formation of a new-level GOVERNING SUBJECT. It is toward this knowledge that we return now, to its origins, to the point from which radiates the true Goal Vector of Being — purified from the ideological shells and parasitic illusions of the old world.

We have reached an important threshold. This article concludes the second stage of our reflection — however, it DOES NOT CONCLUDE the path itself. Everything stated here should be perceived not as a closed truth, rather as an open door. We have only begun the return to the Great Knowledge — to that profound Truth which for millennia WAS HIDDEN from humanity, immersed in false worldviews alien to its original program of development.

Humanity, embodied as a functional element of the planet's Mind, was not created for suffering, survival, or servitude to illusions. Humanity WAS CREATED as a Co-Creator — as a caretaker of life, an organizer of Being, one who unites the higher energy-informational levels with matter. However, to reclaim this destiny, it is necessary to completely overcome the parasitic layers of the past, to discard the distorted concepts, the false scientific dogmas, and the ideological armor within which consciousness cannot breathe.

Of special significance in this return is the theme of VICTORY OVER DEATH. Not in a poetic sense, rather in a precise, programmatic sense. Death is not a “natural finale,” rather it is an implanted mechanism aimed at nullification, at halting development, at severing the link between awareness and function. The same applies to aging: it is not an inherent property of matter, rather the result of DISTORTED GOVERNANCE, a failure in energy-informational support, a loss of connection with the governing fields of the Earth. And therefore — it can be overcome. The victory over aging and death is not a metaphor, rather it is a strategic task, built into the Third Goal Vector. And it will begin when Humanity remembers Who It Is.

We live in an era when CONNECTIONS ARE BEING RESTORED — those once thought lost. When Knowledge once again flows toward those ready to receive it not for profit, not for power, rather in service to the Reasonable Path. In this, and not in technological progress, lies the true evolution. Not the prolongation of the old agony, rather the BIRTH OF ANOTHER. Not a “victory over nature,” rather a return to harmony with it.

The next article will continue this path. We will turn from the past to the present — and address the processes already unfolding within the realms of consciousness, the body, governance, and the very fabric of time. We will explore how the restoration of functional immortality becomes possible, how the overcoming of aging begins, and what transformations are already taking place in the deep levels of the planetary Mind. The transition is underway. It has already begun. And now — it is time to remember and to understand why we came to Earth.
