About fear...

Courage is about resisting fear and controlling fear, not the absence of fear.

The key word in today's world is "fear. Look at how controllable we become in the face of fear. Leaders at all levels – whether it's a city or an entire country – use fear to control us. Fear eats away at our guts. And we are increasingly adapting to living in constant fear: fear of terrorism, fear of poverty, and fear of the unknown. Fear is the main problem of our life, our society, a penetrating, sticky, pervasive, all-encompassing fear. And the main fear in Russia is NOT the FEAR of physical pain, not the fear of violence, not the fear of going to the dentist, not the fear of going to surgery, although all these are extremely unpleasant things. The main fear is the fear of the state. This fear begins in kindergarten, where tiny creatures face educators who distort their soul, their morality, their will. Then it is inherited at school, then at work. It is the fear of the policemen on duty, now called police officers, and the so-called "competent authorities.

The main source of THIS FEAR is the STATE, which destroys morality, which rapes our psyche, makes our life more and more difficult and more hopeless. And it is impossible to achieve anything in Russia, to change anything, if we CANNOT get rid, at least in part, of this pervasive social fear, the main fear - the fear of the state. We have already learned to live with this fear, we have learned how to circumvent it. We are learning to get along with the servants of justice, with those who ostensibly defend the homeland and the rule of law - the guardians of lies, to put it simply. In fact, this fear still sits in the depths of our souls.

It's not power that spoils people, but fear. Those who have power are spoiled by the fear of losing it, and those who submit to power are spoiled by the fear of power.

The current situation, not only in Russia, but all over the world, is characterized by grandiose transformations that are carried out through the new reality of the processes of changing everything and in totality, including people as direct objects of change. Although it was foreseen, and much was said about it, yet, it suddenly dealt the economy of our country and the people such a crushing blow, which is comparable to the situation after the Great Patriotic War.

For me, the main thing in the losses that Russia is suffering is the HUGE LOSS of human capital¹. It will be very difficult for many to return to work because of destructive mental states, so strong that they are capable of destabilizing the psychological and political situation in the country. This is explained by the fact that the current situation forms a system of fears and phobias among Russian citizens waiting to get out of quarantine into the destroyed socio-economic space.

Destructive mental states are caused by a new reality, which was warned about, but few people believed in it. The new reality is becoming more and more evident before our eyes, in the framework of Program changes and in the life support system of people, and in the perception of everything that is happening - this is:

1. Unexpectedness – when innovations are not at all what they were expected to be. (Total work stoppage and job cuts. Total control over human behavior instead of expected freedom.)
2. Inadmissibility – when innovations in politics seem unnatural. (Obedience is demanded without reference to laws, logic, ethics, human rights.)
3. Suddenness – when innovations occur exactly when they were not expected. (Replacement of civil administration by military in peacetime.)

Already today, these fears of future arbitrariness among the masses of people are much more dangerous than the fear of a pandemic, which has acquired the CHARACTER of PHOBIAS among "responsible persons". Sooner or later this pandemic will end, but we can say with certainty that it has been followed by the second and then by the third pandemic, and in these conditions, it will be necessary to live in 2022, 2023, etc. - to produce food, household items and to preserve the education and upbringing of children.

Fears that have been viewed since the nineties are returning. And we HAVE to WORK with this to maintain stability. Here the only thing is who and with whom do we work with in today's conditions of virtual loss of what's going on, especially by those who consider themselves "the masters of processes and our fates"?

1. Fear of hunger, which has a solid footing and which is stored in the memory of the people since the time of revolutions and wars. The so-called dependence of the behavior of the masses of people on the level of FOOD SUPPLY.

2. Fear of betrayal, which has a solid footing due to the disappearance of the country's elite in a difficult hour, as it was in 1917, 1991, 1993.

3. Fear of reprisals, which we are reminded with the peculiar orders of both the country's leaders and regional leaders in the fight against the virus pandemic, and unjustified actions of law enforcement agencies to implement these orders. Administrative zeal HAS REPLACED the systematic professional organization of society in the conditions of the pandemic and the need to preserve production.

4. Fear of being irrelevant. The virus pandemic has destroyed the existing structure of the labor market, making it impossible to restore most of the industries and enterprises – people will not be able to get the job they are used to and will not find another one. However, the main thing is that many branches of the national economy will disappear as a result of the so-called "third industrial revolution", and, modern science CANNOT find employment for those losing these jobs. Meanwhile, a person has a need for work, which "is anchored in a natural foundation, because it is dictated by nature itself: a healthy organism needs a normal portion of labor and the cessation of rest" (K. Marx). The most terrible person - an unoccupied person - that sits in the subcortex of the "ruling elite".

5. Fear of loneliness. After prolonged "self-isolation", it is NOT ONLY the labor market that easily denigrates, but also social ties between people: in isolation, a person finds himself without means of livelihood, help and just real contacts with other people, he is left to himself. In the state of anomie², demoralization develops, as ties with society disappear. There is an experience of alienation from people, voids are formed in life, which will cause deviant behavior and mass suicides. If you do nothing.

6. Fear of crime. Hanging in a metaphysical void (having lost their meaning, goals and values), many citizens of the state WILL CHANGE and will join the ranks of criminal communities that take care of their security and safety. A great number of people abandoned by the state WILL NOT LIVE according to its norms, which give advantages to some and deprive others of any chances. The struggle is conducted by all available methods. Revived: "Blatnyak", which recognizes only thieves' laws; "Banditry" - terrorist bureaucracy, a specific form of governance of society; "Thieves in law" – are recidivist professionals who never work anywhere and live according to the laws of the criminal world: they get money for living only through criminal means; and other ways.

7. Fear of death – One of the urgent problems – the problem of the fear of death, the solution of which is determined by the ideological attitudes of people. The basis for the recognition of the insolvency of the fear of death is the IDEA of a human soul WITHOUT DEATH. But fear, evoking gloomy thoughts, obscures the true ideas about life after death. Some proofs of the soul without death, will not release a person from heavy thoughts and thereby from the fear of death. This line is continued by many so-called political scientists who consider the sources of the fear of death NOT ONLY the inevitable finiteness of human life and the finiteness of non-existence after death, but also social factors. Among them, they include economic distress, which seems to a person to be a "threshold of death" and depriving one of peace of mind. However, this "false fear" of non-existence creates nothing but vices: greed, murder, betrayal, envy and hatred. The only way to get rid of the FALSE FEAR OF DEATH is to know the nature of things and the physics of their internal structure. The mind must be "turned on" here, because it is the mind that acts as a decisive factor on the way to rid a person of the fear of death.

² ANOMIE (from the French anomie - absence of law, organization) is a concept denoting the moral and psychological state of individual and social consciousness, which is characterized by the decomposition of the value system caused by the crisis of society, contradictions between the declared goals and the impossibility of their implementation.

What can be opposed to this? The main wealth of the country: Human capital – a sufficient number of people with the necessary qualities for self-preservation and reproduction in continuously changing and complicated living conditions, it is an analogue and a phenomenon symmetrical to financial capital in significance, importance and value for the country. However, few people understand this, or, to be more precise, understand it, but they are in a PANICKED FEAR of it.

Viability – the ability of people to extend their personal life as long as possible and to continue it uninterrupted in their offspring, through OWNERSHIP and despite the futurism of the continuous changes and trials of life. Detectable as a demographic problem related to the state of people's lifestyles.

Efficiency - the ability of people to work beyond their strength for the necessary time, creating world-class use value WITHIN developed vitality and intelligence. It is found to be an economic problem caused by the erosion of people's lifestyles, and it is today.

Ability to innovate – the ABILITY of PEOPLE to create innovative products in all spheres of life, mastering them at the expense of their life values and not losing faith in themselves and their country in a constantly changing world. It is found in social conflicts caused by the contradiction between their traditional worldview and the NEW REALITY, which some accept and others do not.

Ability to learn – the ability of a person to ACQUIRE KNOWLEDGE, skills, and give them away in the process of solving completely new tasks that continuously arise in all spheres of life. It manifests itself in the formation of a new picture of the world, which allows finding new ways to achieve their goals, but not for everyone, since the process is directly related today to the Brain genotype of each person.

If we talk about food security, which is becoming more and more urgent, but which many see only through the prism of supermarkets, then it will be ensured only if there is Human capital, which should be given priority attention in the economy today. There will be an economy of people - there will be human capital – there will be people able to produce a sufficient amount of food.

However, along with well-founded fears, there are "empty and unfounded" fears. They are peculiar to people "who are extremely susceptible to superstition (and after all, it is nothing but panicked fear), especially in difficult, arduous, troubled times." Fear ("without (with) peace about the future") plays a twofold role. On the one hand, it STIMULATES a person's COGNITIVE ACTIVITY, thanks to which a person acquires practical knowledge that helps him to arrange his life. On the other hand, the "fear of invisible things", combined with ignorance (misunderstanding of what is happening), is the main source of illusory ideas and religion.

Ignorance of the natural causes of certain phenomena generates fantasies, reverence for invisible and imaginative forces that become gods through imagination. Due to these unavoidable circumstances of life, a person begins to experience fear, which increases UNDER the INFLUENCE of IGNORANCE.

In addition to the habit of certain phenomena, I consider knowledge to be a means of overcoming this fear. Fear decreases as a person LEARNS the CAUSES of the observed phenomena and learns how to avoid their effects. If before the emergence of civil society, religion, and with it fear, performed the function of maintaining peace, unity and harmony, then another form of fear appears in civil society, which is necessary to maintain order. This is the fear of punishment inspired by the authorities, without which universal power in human society is unthinkable. All living beings (bees, ants), with the exception of man, "live amicably among themselves" "without any coercive power." And only consent between people is something artificial.

This mechanism (not knowing and not understanding another possibility) is used today by the authorities – the authorities who are unable to think out of their own fear of losing their power. Therefore, their fear is one of the few restrictions that society can oppose to the arbitrariness of power.

New Reality (objectively) EXTREMELY traumatizes human capital, driving a lot of people into destructive mental states, a state of fear of seeing the future, depriving them of the necessary: ability to work, efficiency, the ability to learn, to learn and to innovate. To solve the problem of people returning to effective work, can only be specially trained people who were not previously trained in Russia – THERE was NO need. This was the opinion of those who today "can't count" for reasons known to you and I. To do this, there must be people who are able (learned and trained) to work with so-called mass phenomena³.

³ Mass phenomena – phenomena described in psychological terms and arising and existing in large social groups or masses of people. Mass phenomena of the psyche include: 1) the phenomenon of panic; 2) the phenomenon of crowds; 3) the spread of rumors; 4) the presence of social stereotypes in society; 5) mass religious psychoses; 6) the phenomenon of fashion.

Mass phenomena are a crowd, a rally, a demonstration, strike, participants without orders, traumatized by the new reality. Working with the masses of such people is a very difficult task, extremely necessary today. This, in my opinion– is a profession. Today's rare so-called "state leader" will find the strength, knowledge, and skill to REACH OUT TO AN ANGRY CROWD.

We have seen a concrete example of this right now in Kazakhstan. In Russia, few people have been taught to work with a mass of excited people without using force, because even here there is fear in the subconscious. Who today will be able to teach how to transform the destructive energy of a mass phenomenon into the CREATIVE ENERGY of a solution that will remove the problems that excite people and get a clear result, expressed in saving the political process from violence, material values from destruction, public order from chaos? This is a risky job for STRONG AND INTELLIGENT people, comparable to the ability to return retreating people to the trenches in a war, restore order in the ranks of the masses of people, and prevent them from following extremists. In the process of the formation of the so-called capitalism of today in our country, which still cannot completely replace the socialism built at the time, it intensified instability of the socio-economic situation of representatives of different strata, increased alienation from each other, isolation of a person and his loneliness. In these conditions, a person seems to have gained freedom, which was NOT in the socialist society of the builders of communism, but lost confidence in the future. The surrounding world has become hostile, there are new forces threatening a lonely person – the market and capital. In these conditions, freedom brought uncertainty, lack of strength, doubt, loneliness and anxiety to a person. Therefore, the opposite desire arose – to get rid of freedom. The mechanisms of escape from freedom, loneliness and anxiety are authoritarianism, the desire for destruction and conformity.

Thus, anxiety and subsequent fear can be considered NOT SO MUCH a consequence of the conflict between the elements of the mental structure of the personality, but rather the result of the interaction of the personality and the social conditions of its life. Behind all this is today's state, which destroyed socialism and did not build capitalism. This is a consequence of the processes that have ended within the Old Management System and the processes that have begun within the governance of the New System. I will not dwell here on basic concept of the formation of social Consciousness of people as a certain scenario of joint actions, realized in the past, present and future, and perceived today as an image of the concepts of the resulting events, including the emergence of uncertainty and fear within the most complex cosmophysical processes of the real and already accomplished. You can look at it in my books and make sense of it yourself.

I want to offer my vision in overcoming the fear in what is OCCURING TODAY, initiated by people who believe that the state is only a tool for their Life Support and getting rid of the fear of losing everything (including power) that they have achieved within the framework of this mechanism created by them.

There are two ways to get rid of such fear. The first way is the way of collective action. The second way is much more difficult, but I would say more noble - the individual way. The path of collective action has now been perfectly demonstrated to us all by Khabarovsk residents and residents of the Far East in general. A single emotional impulse, and a huge number of people take to the streets and squares of their hometown, and everyone makes way: the crooked guardians, the mayor's office, the regional authorities and even the authorities in the Kremlin begin to scratch their heads – and what happens? It's not scary yet, but it's already unpleasant. There are many of them, people, a single emotional impulse, but in order to succeed and not be content with just an emotional impulse that will end sooner or later, you always need to have a strategy of action, you need to work out a way that will lead to achieving the goals that people want to achieve. And most importantly, the goal is the beginning of the construction of a NEW STATE, which will be a state that does NOT RAPE our society and our people, but a state for the people, in the name of the people and through our people, our nation.

The path of individual struggle is hard and noble, and sooner or later we all have to get up or think to embark on the path of this struggle. What is the severity of this individual path? If the world of death is red in the faced, then when you struggle with social fears yourself, i.e., you enter into a social conflict with your superiors, you must first, literally according to A. P. Chekhov, "squeeze a slave out of yourself drop by drop." This is a gradual process. It doesn't happen all at once, but very, very rarely. Therefore, we will have to make long-term efforts on the way to get rid of fear, on the way to SUBJUGATE FEAR to OURSELVES and transform fear into a positive emotion, an emotion of struggle, an emotion of achievement. In order to successfully and safely follow this path, we need the following conditions.

First – common sense; second – support of relatives and friends; third – knowledge of at least some simple techniques for dealing with one's own fears and the desire to know what is happening (it is better, of course, to know the very physics of what is happening). And this is possible only when there is no doubt about the authenticity of the information. And only then will the process of understanding the resulting geopolitical processes begin, which will in each case prompt the way to overcome the fear caused by one or another action of people who are sure that "they are the state." When I talk about common sense, it means DON'T RELY on an emotional impulse. An emotional impulse can make you commit actions or activities that you will later bitterly regret. Therefore, first calculate, measure your strength, your own resources with your intentions, even if everything is bubbling inside you. Remember, it has been said more than once that prudence is the most important part of valor. Prudence and caution.

So, measure your strength and determine the real goals that you set for yourself. Secondly, it is very important - it is extremely desirable in the struggle that we are fighting (and the struggle begins inside each of us) to have the support and understanding of family, relatives, friends and people around you. If friends CAN'T help you, they often step aside and say, "... well, you go first, and then we'll follow you ... let's see how you do it," but if you can rely on your family - on your wife, on your children - it's wonderful. It has always been easy for me in this sense, much easier, because I can always rely on my family, on my wife, on my family and friends. But keep in mind the following – even if you have measured your resources, your capabilities with your goals, even if you have support – it is EXTREMELY DIFFICULT to take this first step from understanding the situation to changing the situation, i.e., to take the first step on the path of some kind of protest or conflict or clarification of relations. A very simple technique can help you here. This is a technique of such logical reasoning combined with visualization. Think about what you might face if you come into conflict with the boss, or talk to someone. I mean, DON'T GET into a scandalous conflict, but calmly and with a sense of self-respect start to sort things out and explain on whose side the law is. Think about it – what threatens you? Visualize the worst that can happen. I call it NEGATIVE VISUALIZATION. Presented? Nothing terrible really happened. But this feeling of fear paralyzes us. It seems the most terrible thing. And it turns out - NOTHING TERRIBLE will actually happen.

Even if you have made the transition from awareness of the situation to action, please keep in mind - no one guarantees you success, no one guarantees you victory, no one can promise you that you will defend the truth for yourself or someone else.

There are no guarantees and there can be no guarantees. Moreover, you need to clearly understand in advance that you can lose with a high probability, and for sure you will still lose. But losing in social confrontation, you win in personal terms. It is very important to understand this. When we struggle with social fears, with fears in general, we are not doing it for someone, we are doing it primarily FOR OURSELVES. We are changing our own nature, or we can put it another way – we are revealing our true human nature!

Both our authorities and those who are called the elite, the establishment, are also struggling with fears. Today's events demonstrate this. They experience fear EVEN STRONGER than ours, and they struggle with these fears in a non-trivial way, increasingly resorting to occult practices, completely unaware of the prospects of this. And any of their excuses, thrown in by the flow through their own media - that, they say, it is necessary to maintain order – have nothing to do with it. There is only one convincing explanation for this – the leaders of the state and industry have "discovered" (and especially since the nineties) in the field of fear management – inexhaustible resources of power, control and benefits. But the beginning is taken mainly from the "creativity" of N. Machiavelli⁴, used as part of the implementation of programs by the Ebrov Control System, as one of the factors for creating specific brain genotypes (a tool for managing the subjects of the sovereign). In discussions about mercy and cruelty, about what is better – to inspire love or fear, preference has always been given to the latter. The following arguments were given.

First, love and fear hardly get along with each other.

Second, people are vicious, ungrateful, hypocritical and deceitful.

Third, the fear of punishment is a factor of social behavior and attitude towards the sovereign.

And, finally, the management of subjects with the help of fear is a sign of the sovereign's independence, for "sovereigns love by their own discretion, but fear the discretion of other sovereigns, so a wise ruler is better to count on and depend on himself and not someone else". If before the emergence of civil society, religion, and with it fear, performed the function of maintaining peace, unity and harmony, then in a civil society created within the framework of the state as a management system for solving specific tasks, another form of fear appears, necessary to maintain order. This is the FEAR OF PUNISHMENT inspired by the authorities, without which universal power in human society is unthinkable. Due to these unavoidable circumstances of life, a person begins to experience fear, which increases UNDER the INFLUENCE of IGNORANCE. The means of overcoming this fear, in addition to the habit of certain phenomena, can ONLY be KNOWLEDGE. Fear decreases as a person learns the causes of the observed phenomena and learns how to avoid their effects.

Once again, I will return to the information that has been heard MORE THAN ONCE. Why is everything happening this way? We cannot understand what exactly, through this, "is just so". In our understanding, completely different processes are being implemented, which carry creation and transformations aimed at our benefit, no matter how we continue to resist it.

The fact is that the process of transition into other performing program processes of a higher level of complexity and order on the basis of true cognition, which is now gaining momentum, is far from an UNAMBIGUOUS phenomenon, and actions to embody the newly manifested will have to be implemented by categories of people who will NOT IMMEDIATELY acquire a new state of brain functions. Translating people's brains into higher octaves and thereby opening up a deeper understanding of what is happening around us is not an academic. This process requires, though not a large, but a certain period of time, so we should take into account this fact and this feature of the previous management procedure, including everything related to the fear imputed to us. When forming an insight of a new understanding of what is happening and finding the right answers to the questions that arise in us in gaining other knowledge and management in general, both by ourselves and through people, awareness of the essence and nature of this should be sufficient, unmistakable and profound by those who will be "included" in the executive leadership, who will be allowed to manage. It can be each of us, and it depends only on the Person himself and his desire to overcome fear and to know everything that is given to know today. Then the Person will become significantly more complex and significant in his essence, and the value of the numbers on the personal account, obtained in some previously traditional way, will no longer play any role. The process is underway, it is incredibly fleeting and predetermined!
