

Modern Eloi and Morlocks

(Reflections on a given topic of the article

"Heart and mind...")

The article is an example of the application of systemic knowledge, obtained as a result of analyzing contemporary events, for forecasting the future. Using simple examples, the author has caught and shown the peculiarities of manifestation of the law of History at different stages of development of the history of human society.

He notes that "yesterday's elite became the food of yesterday's outcasts. The most insignificant rodent in the new conditions turned out to be cooler than the most gigantic dinosaur, so much so that he, looking from his burrow at the freezing giant, no longer saw a king, which just yesterday he was afraid to approach, but now, as A FOOD that would freeze a little more, and he could start eating." Such a society does not need creators, it needs professional consumers – they are easier to manage, as G. Gref and A. Chubais noted in their speeches at the economic forum. This situation, which, as the author of the article has shown, must necessarily be faced by the current "Eloi and Morlocks" (which were described in 1895 by the science fiction writer G. Wells in his novel "The Time Machine"). It is impossible to stop this process, as the author emphasizes, because the world is always in motion. Instead of educating creators, professional consumers, i.e., modern eloi, are being trained. In his novel, Herbert Wells describes the world of the future, to which a Time Traveler goes. Using the genre of dystopia, the writer showed how scientific progress, based on existing scientific ideas, led to the degradation of humanity. Where there is no change and there is no need for change, the mind perishes. The traveler visited as far back as 802701 and saw the pampered consumption of eloi living in the aboveground world – they were eaten by gloomy Morlock creatures who grew eloi for themselves as food. To do this, a corresponding myth was invented and the eloi were happy to ebd up in the underworld to the Morlocks, where they were then dissected for food.

The novel describes two kinds of creatures that the human species has become – Morlocks and eloi.

Both of them, over the long millennia of existence that does not require mental activity, have nearly lost their minds, turning into semi-animals. Morlocks specialized narrowly, developing the organ that is necessary to perform their professional functions: a blacksmith has a developed right arm and body part. They created all the benefits for the Eloi, and they lived in constant celebration, having degraded to the level of professional consumers, almost like our deputies in the Duma, our parquet generals with stars of heroes on their jackets, our engineers of human souls, preaching liberalism and democracy in the Western manner, etc.

Morlocks are descendants of workers, "poor", all their lives living in the Underground world and servicing machines and mechanisms. They are much smaller and weaker than modern humans, covered with white fur and do not tolerate bright light.

Eloi are descendants of the former elite of society, the "rich", weak and fragile creatures, completely unsuited to work. The Eloi didn't need an education. As a result, over the millennia, all the books in libraries have turned to dust, because no one has read them...

In our libraries, books are not yet crumbling into dust, but the question remains, who are we training in accordance with the new reforms in secondary and higher education? The answer is simple. We are preparing morons (eloi and Morlocks)! But if we are preparing them, it means that someone needs them. It is easier to manage fools, as comrade G. Gref used to say. So they are preparing morons for themselves. Moreover, the attack comes from different directions, covering all aspects of life. Intelligence is dangerous, especially dangerous is the situation when people begin to understand what they already know, so it is necessary, for example, to actively get the population drunk, because alcohol destroys intelligence, people and their essence better than any weapon, as our bard V. Vysotsky wrote:

"You don't need a knife for an alcoholic,
Pour him a little drink and do with him what you want!"

It is even better to bring all people's perceptions to complete indifference to themselves and to fear from the thought of the omnipotence of power. During the period of redistribution, a significant part of the population has become indifferent to their fate. A. S. Pushkin wrote about it in his time:

Graze, peaceful peoples!
You will not be awakened by the cry of honor.
Why should the herds be given the gifts of freedom?
They should be cut or sheared.
Their inheritance from generation to generation
A yoke of rattles and a scourge.

Try to take away from them the attributes of a "happy" life, they will not give it back...
As the author writes: "No arguments of reason have any effect on them, because their way of life depends on the system. The destruction of the system will lead to the destruction of their lives."

Passionaries who are NOT EMBEDDED in the system always strive to destroy the old in the fiercest way, offering their idea if the time has come for it.

The inevitability that the old world will surely collapse, and it's only a matter of time, inspires some optimism. And every time a New One clears a platform for itself "to create a new model." But the sooner the platform for the creation of a new model is released, the faster all resources will be concentrated on solving the MAIN TASK – overcoming death.

The whole story, as a program for the development of Brain genotypes, is the Main Law of History, and NOT ANYTHING else. And the sooner a worldview idea is lowered into society, the faster people will begin to structure around it. If, in general, we briefly describe the process of developing an idea and its mastering by the society, then it occurs in the following sequence:

Initially, the idea captures the mind of an individual (the starting point) – then it turns into various lines (directions) of its development – then the development passes into a plane covering many "lines" – and, finally, the development passes from the plane into the space (covering the volume) occupied by society.

Thus, in order for the evolution of society to reach the next stage, a powerful IDEOLOGICAL IDEA of the TYPE is needed:

IDEAS OF OVERCOMING DEATH.

At the same time, according to the OFCH, no more than 12 percent of the World's population can be integrated into the Future, similarly with globalists – 88 percent of the population are subject to recycling, although the Earth has the ability to feed, using existing food production technologies – 17 billion, and according to other data - 600 billion people.

Any state can be conventionally represented as a multitude of small balls of mercury randomly placed on some surface. At first, the drops are all about the same. But then, due to some external and internal factors, in different places the drops merge together to form larger balls, and in other areas the drops remain in an unchanged position, because there are forces or factors that prevent the merging of drops of different sizes into one. Time passes and again by some factors, which fulfill the functions of ideas or concepts, the drops begin to enlarge, eliminating the reasons preventing them from uniting the drops. The main task remains the main task, for only it purposefully strives for the final unification of the drops, which will represent the life of the final drop created from the small ones. Further, the drop will live according to uniform laws determined by the physical properties that the drop itself possesses. As a result, there should be one big drop with the sole purpose of maintaining its stability.

There is an integral state of different subsystems, each of which has its own ideas, attitudes, boundaries between them, initially insurmountable, but then the subsystems at the ideological level unite, become larger and a new ideology, or goal is developed for them, gradually leading its development to a crisis. Then, at a new level, their confrontation takes place, leading to the erasure of the boundaries that hinder them.

Currently, there is no ideological idea proportional to the level of development of society. And, as the author of the article notes, life is the basis of all goals, meanings and achievements. And since all people are mortal, the IDEA OF OVERCOMING DEATH is able to maintain the entirety of humanity.

Based on the regularity described by the author, a new ideological social network is needed in the form of a supranational force, in fact a Virtual State that unites everyone on the basis of a single ideological idea that eliminates the boundaries between all subsystems of this virtual education. As the author notes: "The new Reality requires understanding, not knowledge, which is not the same thing." Therefore, new approaches to the formation of a new state structure of Russia as a whole should be perceived, according to the author of the article, only "with the heart and mind." Let's agree with him.
