Project 369 – Or Perhaps... Search for Ways

Tomorrow Depends on How We Conduct Ourselves Today.

Our consciousness is structured in such a way that it rejects unsolvable problems. Yet is it consciousness that decides what is to be solved? Our Brain is structured in such a way that it avoids unsolvable problems — it "has not grown to that level." Whether by octave or level of development — whichever way one prefers to consider it, what matters is the negative result.

However, if a problem exists, there must be a solution. Mathematicians found a saving formula — "under the given conditions, the problem has no solution." Yet if there is no solution, it would still be good to at least see the problem itself, to examine it from behind, from the front, from the sides, from above, from below. This is what it looks like. Impossible to solve. Or is it possible after all? There are many such things — original sin, salvation, redemption, why God is needed if He exists, why He created evil, and if He does not exist, what is the meaning of life... And especially today — what is actually happening? Why is it happening precisely this way, and how will all of this end? Everyone searches for and finds suitable answers in a tear-off calendar, or in the catechism,¹ or in Wikipedia, or, as is fashionable now — "ask Google." Yet for some reason, no logic provides an answer. Christianity does not provide one either. Nor does Judaism. Nor Buddhism. "Then perhaps one should resign oneself to it..." many think — there are simply too many unsolvable questions. There are things one must learn to live with and outgrow, rather than solve... Or perhaps...

In order to get something moving, one must not resign oneself to the situation or calculate the depth of the fall, rather search for effective ways out of the situation that has developed. This must become a priority. In order to search for ways out of the existing situation and find them, first and foremost, information is needed, along with the ability to evaluate it adequately. It must be accessible and understandable. It must be protected, and the best protection of information — IS ITS DISSEMINATION. This is what I proceed from, and I want to convey to people all the information at my disposal, which I have drawn from those sources I trust, as well as from my own observations and judgments, in order to explain what is happening — something that, especially over the past several months, has burst into our lives like a hurricane, "sweeping away" all our concepts of what had been instilled in us from birth. Emotions have overwhelmed people's Mind, causing confusion and a certain sense of hopelessness in the thinking of many. Those who believe that, by virtue of their "extensive" experience in politics, in forecasting situations, and in explaining them, they know what is happening, say and write one thing; those who oppose them and have a so-called "opinion of their own," arising from their own life experience and "experience in politics," — say and write something entirely different, completely opposite. So, where is the ordinary "electorate" supposed to turn? And we also have an "elite"

— those who have called (labeled) themselves as such and take pride in their "elitism," having confined themselves within the framework of searching for answers to questions concerning the primacy of the phenomena "chicken — egg," "matter — consciousness," "money in the morning — chairs in the evening," and why it cannot be the other way around. At times, in their reasoning, they rise to attempts to comprehend where passionaries² come from at the necessary historical moment, where and why they and entire societies go. The seemingly correct manifestations of their answers plunge people even deeper into confusion and incomprehension of everything that is happening, or compel them to accept on faith everything that this "elite" proclaims.

The intensity of passions, fueled from all sides over the past several months, against the backdrop of the "suddenly emerged" COVID-19 coronavirus pandemic and the adoption of the so-called "amendments to the Constitution," the "resetting of everything and everyone," has led to the fact that NEITHER the economy, nor politics, nor diplomacy, nor people — KNOW what to expect from the new political reality, and all because it lies "beneath the surface" — it is a deep psychological-political problem. Deep because the unusual, sudden, unexpected, unacceptable is taking place in the "depths of the political psychology" of peoples: today, all the secrets of what will happen in the coming years are hidden there. Yet with the help of information and the correct understanding of this information, by explaining it to ordinary people, a great deal can be anticipated in order to avoid the mistakes that the majority are making today while searching for a way out of the situation that has arisen. For a person who is genuine in terms of worldview, the main question today is the awareness of one's true purpose on Earth, a deep understanding of ONE'S PERSONAL FUNCTIONS and one's obligatory and maximum possible usefulness, by the very fact of one's existence, to others who are one's equals. That is, this is the question of the meaning of a person's life under the new conditions of states and processes, including correctly comprehended orientation in one's own development, harmonized with the overall changes taking place on Earth as a whole.

Fig. 1. "The Gates of Hell" 1890 (fragment). The Greatest Work of O. Rodin

All normal people want to understand where, for what purpose, and why they are being asked to go precisely in this direction. Not to listen to the constant deceitful glorification of "heroic" achievements through the theatricalized lies of historical impostors and false patriots, rather to deeply comprehend the true root causes and consequences of everything that has been done to Russia from the end of the twentieth century to the present day. Only this will allow people to bring their state of mind into peaceful revelation and free them from historical filth, giving them the possibility of personal choice. The present theoretical and ideological darkness of Russia, which emerged as a result of the BLINDING BRILLIANCE OF LIES through the diligence and intervention of "Western helpers," should BE ILLUMINATED ONLY BY TRUTH! Truth is based on truthful information, true information, which people will perceive according to their knowledge and understanding. However, I understand perfectly well that speaking with a person who thinks in habitual categories about subjects that are unfamiliar because of their enormous scale is equivalent to speaking with a child. Most people, even intelligent ones, will not take such a conversation seriously. If someone thoroughly understands nuclear physics or knows by heart the structure of a mosquito's leg, this indicates the presence of intellect or a store of knowledge, yet NOT SCALE OF THOUGHT. Intellect alone, if there is no large-scale thinking, solves nothing. One cannot do something whose scale one has not encompassed. Because one will not believe in the reality of the undertaking. And without believing, one will consider it nonsense and empty fantasy. And one more remark, in my view no less important, in order to move forward in one's understanding — People always act not on the basis of knowledge of reality, rather according to their scale of thinking. People of great scale in this sense are actually few and far between. The majority — are simple, ordinary people. Like children, they become deeply upset if some strange uncle takes away their toy. Yet they will not even raise an eyebrow if this uncle carries all the valuables out of their apartment. Because the valuables lie beyond the boundaries of their worldview. The principal treasure for most people — is toys. The same applies when determining the scale of a personality. If a person's apartment is robbed, it will be a great misfortune for them. Yet if their country is robbed, they will not even pay attention. Because this problem lies OUTSIDE THEIR FIELD of vision.

² Passionary — is an inner thirst for activity directed toward the realization of some goal, which, as a rule, is difficult for a person to control and explain to oneself. It is connected with the ability to receive more energy from the external environment than is required for personal and species survival. A passionate individual (passionary) subconsciously uses the excess energy to create a state of internal overstrain and fixation on a particular idea. Such ideas are always connected with changing the surrounding world. The drive toward activity in such individuals may be conscious or unconscious. Their goals are often illusory, lying beyond rational explanations and objective circumstances, yet to them, the necessity of achieving these goals may seem more important than their own life, and even more so than the lives and happiness of other people.

At what scale do you feel, think, and act? At the scale of yourself? Your family? Your relatives? Your country? Humanity? The answer to this question is the measure of your scale. If all your aspirations come down to buying new "toys," and this is precisely what you seek money for, then in fact you are — a child in a sandbox. All children strive to "make sand cakes." Some have made them, others dream of making them, yet in both cases their aspirations rise no higher than sand cakes. With age, the childhood sandbox transforms into an adult one. Mansions and "Rolls-Royces" now take the place of sand cakes and little shovels. The quality and cost of the "sand cakes" change, yet the essence remains the same — the sandbox. Therefore, it is characteristic of a person with a childlike type of thinking to CARE ONLY ABOUT ONESELF. And even if one has an academic degree, a fortune of one hundred million, and is fifty years old, if one thinks only about oneself, in essence — one is a child. If one also thinks about one's family, one is more grown-up. If one also thinks about one's relatives, one is almost completely grown-up. Yet one's "adulthood" still falls short of the required scale. Our Fatherland (I emphasize — Fatherland, far from merely a country) needs people who think and are prepared to ACT IN ACCORDANCE WITH KNOWLEDGE.

Those who are capable, for the good of Russia, of deeds that are not tied to personal gain. As in the song: "Think first of the Motherland, and then of yourself." I believe and know that there are still people who regard Russia as their own family, who think on a global scale. Those who are not intimidated by such scope. Because the more of us there are, the fewer of them there are. This is the key to success.

The scope of thought of most people never extends beyond "plant a tree, build a house, raise a child." All of this is undoubtedly wonderful, yet someone must think about planting forests, building cities, and educating the people. If no one is engaged in this, if everyone does everything at their own discretion, the fate of trees, houses, and people gradually ends up in the hands of predators. Like robbers who have entered a house where there are no adults, they calmly plunder it, confident of their impunity. Because they know — the children will understand nothing, and there are no adults.

Question: how can children protect themselves from intelligent and talented predators who have come to rob their home?

Answer: only through growing up and through cognition.

Fig. 2. Cognition of the World

Cognition based on information whose authenticity is beyond doubt.

And only then will the process of understanding the ongoing geopolitical processes, moral corruption, fluctuations in currency exchange rates, pricing policy, squandering of resources, and other problems begin. Today, unfortunately, the scale of thinking of the majority excludes such a possibility. One can, of course, write a great deal about this — construct various assumptions and theories — reflect on what will happen after some time — yet all of this IS NO MORE THAN stirring the air, intended merely for one's own reassurance and nothing more. One can search for information, try to comprehend it, relying on the significance of authors, scientific and historical "authorities" — yet all of this will be like "playing toward one goal" until we understand the very root cause of what is happening and comprehend ourselves within the processes unfolding before our very eyes. Yet all the same — there must be something from which one can begin, perhaps even ACCEPT ON FAITH, and having embarked upon this path, move forward, comparing everything one learns with what has been given to us throughout our entire lives as the "ultimate truth." This is very difficult; it can be compared with Hercules undertaking to clean the Augean stables, yet it is worth it. The understanding that will come after comprehending what has been learned will undoubtedly change both your life and the lives of those people who believe you and follow your path.

Almost ten years have already passed since the moment when INFORMATION WAS REVEALED that carries answers to practically all the questions that people search for and cannot find. Information that "exploded" the Brain of people who seek, people who strive for cognition. Yet, unfortunately, this information has still not reached the minds of the majority, due to certain reasons that hindered and continue to hinder its dissemination and, most importantly — its understanding. What has happened recently in our country fully corresponds to what was set forth ten years ago and makes it possible to foresee what awaits us ahead, as well as that for which people are now searching for answers, having become completely confused and drowned in streams of informational lies created precisely for what will be discussed.

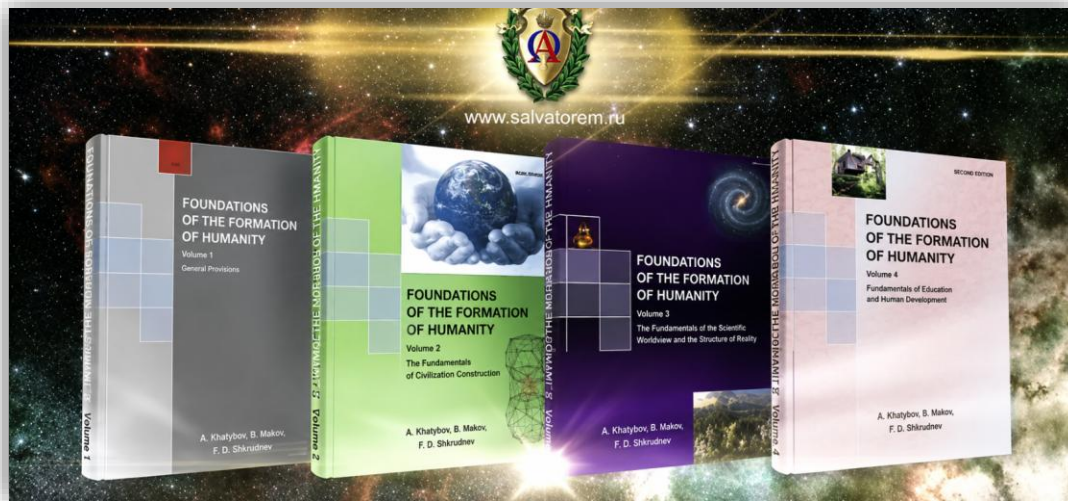

Fig. 3. Up-to-Date Information

This work is called — "Fundamentals of the Formation of Humanity" (FFH 1-4). It is not difficult to find, read if one wishes, and draw conclusions specifically for oneself. I have repeatedly referred to it and used it in writing my books and many articles.

However, I am convinced that I must return to this information, which is extremely relevant today, and once again present it to people with my comments and explanations, which will make it possible to become convinced of the truthfulness and relevance of this information and, however grandiloquent this may sound — of the possibility of understanding what is happening today — of which you and I are participants — whether we want it or not. And when I saw a video sent to me that captured an event — one that does not fit within any bounds of common sense — Pope Francis kissing the feet of the leaders of South Sudan, I realized that I am doing everything correctly.

These will be articles (blocks of information) addressing the most pressing challenges and events of today, yet for those who become interested in this, I recommend first and foremost consulting the original source.

With this introduction, I begin my new work, which I spoke about as I was finishing the fifth book in the series

"N. Levashov's 'SvetL Broom' in A. Khatybov's 'Bathhouse Business' and the Labor Shovel."

Fig. 4. "...I Ask You with All My Heart..."

It will consist of 369 articles, notes, essays, and other forms of presenting information (abbreviated — Series 369), explanations of this information and, possibly, recommendations for its application.

As always, I leave the conclusions to the readers, and especially to those who find in these answers to the questions that have arisen for them.
