Project 369 – The Frontier of a New Reality...

A new reality does not simply arrive — it is discovered by those who are able to endure the truth about the old one.

Every era dies quietly, yet the world feels its death as a rumble that arrives long before understanding. We have entered such a time: the old order is collapsing not for political reasons and not because of human mistakes — IT IS DISAPPEARING because the very System that held together the fabric of the world has departed. The governing breath of the old world has stopped, and reality has begun to change its form. At the boundary of these changes, a person feels NOT JUST fear or confusion, rather the loss of an inner anchor — the very one that for millennia belonged not to the individual, rather to external Control. When it disappears, a person is left alone before a world that for the first time becomes real, not prescribed. This is where the Frontier of a New Reality begins: a place where the old no longer functions, and the new has not yet taken shape. Such a Frontier cannot be crossed in the usual way — through trust in words, dogmas, or authorities. It opens only to those who are CAPABLE OF LOOKING into the depth of what is happening, without turning away. For a new reality does not arrive on its own — it is opened by the one who is able to withstand the truth about the old. We stand on a threshold where the world demands not reaction, rather insight.

It is November 2025 on the calendar. And suddenly I imagined: I am sitting in the warm carriage of a train car, listening to the steady rhythm of wheels, looking out the window as if through a dampened mirror of the world. Beyond the rain-soaked glass stretches autumn — soft, almost painted with a watercolor brush, as if nature itself decided for a moment to become an artist and a philosopher. The train rushes forward, and with this movement THOUGHTS ARE BORN — in my head, light, melancholic, yet strangely optimistic. Behind me remain vivid impressions; within me — memories and experience. Life experience. And the experience of overcoming limitations. Why did all this surface now? Probably because the thought found me again: what has been understood must be given to people — yet given in such a way that they truly grasp it. So that information ceases to be mere words and becomes knowledge — their own, internal, capable of illuminating this difficult, tangled time, which can no longer be outlined by the ideas and knowledge humanity currently possesses. Such a thought suddenly came. Or, perhaps more ACCURATELY — IT DAWNED ON ME. Curiously, it struck me in autumn. The word is not just fitting — it is ancient, multi-layered: "to be struck by insight," "to envelope," echoes both with autumn, and with — "canopy," with that time of year when the world seems covered by a quiet golden veil and comes closer to the essence of things. And, incidentally, according to the ancient chronology of our ancestors, it is not 2025 at all, rather the year 7534 — and it begins precisely from the autumnal equinox. Autumn is the ANCIENT BEGINNING OF THE NEW.

When I finished the last article "82–369" of the 369 series, the thought arose to look back — not simply at the events of ten or fifteen years ago, rather at their hidden meaning. Not to explain them from the linear standpoint of "this is how it happened," rather from the standpoint of the GLOBAL PROCESS — the shift of Earth's Control System. And here again something appeared that is difficult to call a coincidence. Just as before, the central theme suddenly became the overcoming of limitations. "Our main task is not to look at what lies in the misty distance, rather to do what lies at hand..." wrote Thomas Carlyle back in 1871. And in this simple thought there is a truly living truth. One can endlessly gaze into the distance, contemplate, and take no action — it is easier, safer, more familiar. However, life, if you think about it, loves not spectators, rather those who are READY TO ACT: to move forward, to work, to create, to think. Not to look into the distance before its time, but at one's feet — where the path is being born right now.

For progress — real progress, inner progress, not technocratic glitter — has always demanded its price: effort, danger, risk. And there are no depths of the human being that this progress does NOT REACH. Today we witness these risks and dangers directly — they are not abstraction, not theory. And if we are to speak of progress at all, then we must understand it as the movement of a HIGHER PRINCIPLE within a person, as the evolution of spirit, mind, and responsibility. Even more so now, when technocratic civilization is undergoing a crisis, and the world of things is increasingly used as a disguise for the degradation of human substance. We all hear the saying: "If you are not interested in politics, then politics is interested in you." And in this, too, lies the paradox of freedom: liberation from freedom is merely a NEW CAGE, a limitation masked as convenience. For some, limitations are a cozy fortress — a fence, armor, walls that seem to protect from the outside world, from fear, from the necessity to act. One can hide in a castle, behind the doors of an apartment, although history shows clearly: no wall, even one decorated with gold, MAKES a person truly protect. As in past centuries of war and chaos, the illusion of a fortress is the most unreliable fortress. And in general, any limitation is a BRAKE ON EVOLUTION — a barrier not outside, rather within us. And therefore, movement forward always begins at the moment when a person sees not a cage, but a door.

Politics today bursts out of every crack like steam from an overheated boiler, screaming that the former methods of holding power through modern social constructions are becoming increasingly difficult — and at times utterly helpless. The world seems to be entering a phase where any political decision immediately turns into a NEW CONFLICT, and the stability of familiar structures melts faster than we can comprehend what has happened. Conflicts arise increasingly and more often — and often without visible reasons, as if they are generated not by human will, rather by some deep systemic malfunction. The socionic profile of any state becomes MORE AGGRESSIVE, and the inter-state space grows ever more explosive. This is not a theoretical observation — it is today's reality. In the inter-confessional sphere, which until recently remained the last island of relative stability, the former balance no longer exists. It is enough to look at Ukraine or the Middle East — zones where everything is being remelted: the social, the religious, the cultural. The political constructions of different states, no matter how "democratic" their façade may appear, reveal their antagonistic nature with increasing clarity: they do NOT UNIFY society — they fragment it; they do not create order — they generate chaos.

The methodological foundations of value-based approaches, which once decorated reports and strategic documents, are steadily sliding onto the rails of a corrupt and decaying existence. Ethnic foundations, cultural norms, traditions of civilized coexistence — those very pillars that upheld the historical resilience of nations — are collapsing. The world has acquired a steady, almost MECHANICAL TRAJECTORY, leading it toward a state of accelerated and, most importantly, irreversible destruction. And the strangest part: representatives of modern social sciences, even with an arsenal of methodologies, concepts, and models, CANNOT offer solutions that do not collapse into utopia or collective bewilderment. The usual tools have stopped working — as if the very nature of the processes has slipped beyond their reach.

All this is happening against the backdrop of a phenomenon long presented as progress — the information society. We were told that free access to information is a blessing, a liberation, a new stage of development. However, it turned out to be merely a QUANTITATIVE CHANGE, without a qualitative one. If earlier a person was limited in access to information by external circumstances — a library, a newspaper, an official source — now the number of sources has become practically infinite: far more than a person's brain is capable of processing. And what is the result? A paradox that has been brewing for a long time: the excess of information has STOPPED TURNING into knowledge. Unstructured fragments of reality no longer assemble into a coherent picture of the world. The degree of being informed grows, while the level of understanding, of systemic thinking, of the ability to “package” data into knowledge — IS FALLING RAPIDLY. Intelligence as potential remains the same, while the ability to use it is degrading. This is how a state arises in which a person knows everything — and understands nothing.

Today, more people are encountering a phenomenon that until recently seemed rare — dyslexia<sup>1</sup> in its modern, expanded form: the INABILITY TO UNDERSTAND even a relatively simple text as a whole. Any properly constructed text is a living organism. It is structured, its parts are interconnected, and it reveals its meaning only when read in its entirety, not when torn into fragments. However, dyslexia works differently: it seizes a single fragment, while everything else simply disappears from memory, as if dissolving in an intellectual fog. In popular speech this has long been described crudely yet accurately: “You look at the book — and see nothing.” And so, a paradoxical situation arises: two people may argue themselves hoarse over the meaning of what they read, yet neither the meaning of the text nor each other do they UNDERSTAND. Each relies on their own fragment, as if on a map of the world that shows only one island. They speak the same language, but not within the same context — and therefore their meanings do not intersect. Instead of understanding, a “white noise” appears — an informational background disconnected from reality, which in the minds of those who suffer from fragmentary perception becomes a NEW REALITY. Their own — artificial, chaotic, built not on logic, rather on randomness. I encounter this constantly, especially when observing the level of comments on some of my texts. Where understanding of at least the basics of dialectics — the unity and transitions of opposites — is required (not to mention a trialectical<sup>2</sup> view with its variables “subject — object — environment,” the reader begins responding to fragments, FAILING TO GRASP the meaning of the whole. He argues not with me, rather with his own projection of whatever he HAPPENED TO REMEMBER. Such communication is meaningless in principle: dialogue is impossible when each participant holds only a fragment, not the fabric of meaning. Yet none of this is a reason to restrict the sharing of information or to hide what one knows. These are ARTIFICIALLY CREATED barriers that arise from people’s lack of understanding of what they are doing — or more precisely, of who and what acts through them, shaping their perception. They do not understand what is happening because they have lost the ability to perceive reality as a whole. That is why SHEDDING LIGHT on all these issues — and many others — through the prism of restored truth is essential. It allows one to see the grim reality concealed behind dazzling political rhetoric. The governing “power elite” ACTIVELY DECLARES a “bright” lie — about stability, development, prosperity — while the real processes in society, culture, the economy, and the spiritual sphere have long testified to the opposite. Only an honest, rigorous view of what is happening allows conclusions that go beyond comfortable illusions and forms the basis of a new ideological platform grounded not in simulation, rather IN TRUTH. Such a view is needed above all to realistically assess the existing internal and external circumstances, their causes, their interconnections. This makes it possible to identify the necessary courses of action — not decorative, but real, urgent, and forced. This is a necessary, final, and decisive step FOR PRESERVING Russia’s autonomy in its future development, for ensuring protection from external destructive influences, and for acquiring a leading role in the transition from the current state of Humanity to what may be called its future evolutionary level — the state of Humanity as a coherent, unified species.

In dyslexia, problems arise with recognizing letters, linking them to sounds, and understanding written text; however, this is not related to low intelligence.

The current theoretical and ideological situation in Russia, shaped under the influence of the dazzling glare of lies zealously implanted by external “helpers,” demands one thing: TO SPEAK ONLY THE TRUTH. The truth of what is happening. Not omissions, not interpretations crafted to fit desired scenarios, rather a clear explanation of the processes. And this, essentially, is what I intend to do by returning to the origins of those key moments that neither “commentators” nor “interpreters” have been able to explain correctly to this day. They are UNABLE — because the most important thing has been lost: the integrity of perception, the ability to see not a fragment, but a system.

First, I intend to “draw” a psychological portrait of the global power structure — not the one that flashes in the news, rather the one that can be seen only when looking through the structure of processes, through their inner logic and repetition. This portrait is known to very few: most people live inside events, not above them, and therefore DO NOT SEE the level at which global scenarios begin their work. Without understanding the motivation of global power, it is impossible to understand why it launches large-scale operations — including medical ones — and what goal it pursues. Later I will move on to what truly stands behind these processes: the real mechanisms, those who SERVE AS THE EXECUTORS of the plans they outline, and the reasons why these plans will not be realizable in the foreseeable future. To bring this picture closer, I will recall the events of 2009, when the so-called “swine flu” pandemic erupted. Everything then unfolded astonishingly similar to 2020: panic, masks, emergency measures, the rapid introduction of procedures that no one really understood. In Russia, by decree of President D. Medvedev, 42 million doses of the drug WERE PURCHASED. The outcome that emerged seven years later was a SHARP INCREASE in infertility among young couples. Moreover, an identical operation with the same 42 million doses was carried out two years later in Ukraine. This strange coincidence of numbers is an element of occult symbolism which, according to many researchers, is obsessed with modern global governance. At that time, in parallel with the swine flu campaign, global plans were already marking a transition to a new world order scheduled for 2015. These schemes even manifested the figure of a future “world ruler,” who was supposed to be Prince William. However, The OPERATION FAILED. Why? First, it became known that in Germany, members of the Bundestag were vaccinated with a completely different composition — essentially a placebo, a simple saline solution. Similar data emerged from other countries, causing scandals. Second, complications began to arise in several European states, which forced the campaign to be curtailed by the summer of 2010 as if it had never existed. However, the consequences — ESPECIALLY DEMOGRAPHIC — were massive. In 2019-2020 everything was repeated, yet far more harshly. Total censorship was imposed in the media and on the internet. Dissenting doctors were dismissed en masse, and in some countries, there were even cases of physical elimination of specialists who interfered with the operation. According to a plan allegedly delivered to the leadership of Pfizer back in 2019, in early 2020 a NEW STAGE was supposed to begin — up to the introduction of martial law in major European countries. Events indeed took on a global scale. The main point is not the medical side. All these processes, in the worldview framework of many researchers, are built on an occult foundation. The dates, symbols, numerical coincidences — are not accidental. The leadership of these operations is attributed not to the WHO, but rather to BANKING STRUCTURES, primarily the World Bank, where power over finances — and therefore over global scenarios — is concentrated. And without considering this occult-religious component, the picture of what is happening inevitably becomes distorted and incomplete. At the core of global intentions lies a scheme aligned with the imagery of the Apocalypse: the first horse — disease; the second — war; the third — famine; the fourth — death, meaning a sharp reduction of the population. And within this logic, events genuinely fall into a sequence where one manifestation follows another — not in strict order, rather simultaneously, overlapping, interacting, reinforcing each other. Disease MUST CONTINUE in the form of new strains and new treatments. War must expand, drawing in more countries. Famine must become the inevitable consequence of destroyed logistics. All of this, within the indicated worldview perspective, is not chaos, rather it is a stage of a written scenario.

What is happening today in the sphere of sanctions, logistical disruptions — and blockades also fits into this scheme. The destruction of trade chains and interdependencies is meant, in the design of the globalists, to lead to chaos and to a deep food crisis. Such is the structure of the future they would like to build.

The psychological state of the global elite can be described with only one WORD — OBSESSION. This is not merely a group of people with inflated ambitions, a thirst for control, or a pathological drive for global domination. These are RELIGIOUS FANATICS of an occult type, carriers of a specific form of consciousness that has lost its connection with reality. Their psychology is not political rationality, rather, it is a mixture of occult belief, mystical dogmas, and a rigid inner dependence on the cult they themselves created. And WITHOUT UNDERSTANDING the nature of this obsessive condition, it is impossible to understand the events or the processes unfolding in the world today. Impossible — because the processes themselves are consequences of their inner madness, caused by reasons unknown to them. Many researchers of the history of religion have pointed this out: behind the outward political, economic, and ideological decorations lies a MENTAL STATE that can be described as a state of anisotropy<sup>3</sup> of consciousness — distortion, loss of integrity, and the emasculation of humanity. The elite's misanthropy is not merely the result of economic doctrines or mass-management theories. It is a symptom of their derangement, of their deep bond with an occult ideology in which a human being is viewed as an object, a resource, a material, a thing. However, it is important to look broader. Everything I have described above is NOT ONLY the psychology of individuals. It is the auto-motor nature of actions within the programmed processes of the old Control System — the one that for MANY CENTURIES governed humanity not as a self-sufficient species, rather as an object of energy-informational exploitation. And so it was meant to be within the old paradigm, where the human was viewed as an ELEMENT OF A PROGRAM, and civilization as a TOOL FOR SERVICING developmental programs. Yet at a certain moment — relatively recently — the Management of this System was terminated. The old control circuits have been eliminated. Their place is taken by the re-creation of the native Control System, WHICH RESTORES the natural format of development. And this means one thing: the liquidation of the old programs also means the collapse of the civilization that stood upon them. The disappearance of the controlling core of the old System automatically makes it IMPOSSIBLE TO CONTINUE the old development model. This is the true conclusion, hidden from people for many centuries and revealed only when fundamental changes in control occurred. It is precisely this conclusion that MUST BE PRESENTED openly — now, at a time when humanity stands on the brink of understanding its own history and the nature of its limitations. This conclusion is not an embellishment of the text and not a philosophical figure of speech: it is THE KEY to dispelling the fog in human consciousness, to restore the ability to distinguish truth from falsehood, to recover an understanding of reality and one's place within it. This is necessary not only for the present generation but for those to come — as the beginning of a new worldview stage.

It is important to note that for centuries people were kept unaware of their object-like role in the past — their use as an instrument within the developmental programs of the interventionist System.

<sup>3</sup> The state of anisotropy in a human being is not a medical term, but rather an analogy to conditions in which the properties of isotropy (uniformity) are disrupted.

The civilization in which we have lived for the last millennia was built on coercion, on the use of people as a biological carrier of functions, not as an independent subject of evolution. This is the true SUMMARY MEANING of the processes that must be understood: the programmatically imposed meaning of human life lay not in development, not in free knowledge, not in spiritual growth, rather in the MANDATORY ACQUISITION of material goods and services as instruments for maintaining biological survival. This was a goal artificially presented as meaning; however, that meaning changed strictly in accordance with the stages of the program of energy-biogenesis and with the development of brain genotypes defined by the old System.

The goal-oriented development of civilization was the production of goods and services, the improvement of methods for obtaining them, and the constant increase in the quantity and quality of material goods. Technologies were presented as progress, although in reality they were merely the IMPROVEMENT OF TOOLS for carrying out the System's programmatic tasks. It treated humans harshly and objectively, taking into account their limited material purpose. This is the truth that the present generation must recognize, however difficult it may be. Without it, it is IMPOSSIBLE TO UNDERSTAND what is happening. And impossible to see what is coming to replace the old System — the birth of a different paradigm in which the human ceases to be an object and becomes a subject.

Without the former informational support from the Control Complexes of the old System, most functions of individuals with the 42nd, 44th, and 46th brain genotypes lose their active executive state. This is not a metaphor and not a hyperbole — it is a FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLE on which the previous model of people was built. Their ability to perceive the surrounding "objective" reality depended directly on the constant flow of external information that synchronized their perception, thinking, emotional sphere, and experience. When this flow disappeared, such people's perception of the world began gradually to lose adequacy. They began to lose not only the level of understanding they once considered their achievement but also lost the very SKILL OF EXISTENCE in the former environmental conditions, which had previously been automatically sustained by the System. Reality, as they knew it, was not an independent phenomenon, rather a FUNCTION OF FREQUENCY CONDITIONS provided from outside. It was enough to alter the frequencies of hearing and vision, to slightly shift gravitational ranges — and the environment would immediately acquire different space-time parameters. And the brain, tuned to the old control frequencies, STOPPED PERCEIVING it as reality.

This process is becoming increasingly visible today, first and foremost among representatives of the so-called "ruling" elites around the world. Their behavior has become irrational even at the level of basic logic: causal perception is disrupted, decisions become absurd, reactions to facts DO NOT CORRESPOND to the facts, and the ability for systemic analysis disappears almost entirely. However, this is only a superficial symptom. Deeper — something else: the former informational flow that sustained the life processes of cells is losing density and multicomponent structure. This marks the beginning of the degradation of the organism's energy-biogenesis. And not slow degradation — rapid. In a short time, metabolic processes are disrupted and bodily systems collapse, systems that were previously maintained not by biology in the strict sense, rather by governing fields. What medicine calls “diseases” are merely external markers of far deeper mutational deviations. Avian, swine, and any other flus; ever new outbreaks of strange illnesses; the appearance of unusual physiological anomalies — all of this is only the FIRST SIGNALS. This is exactly what worries many people today, who believe they have become prone to “many illnesses” due to age. “Trifles,” compared to the scale of the ongoing transformations. And here arises the question: can the “businessmen in white coats” resist this process? THE ANSWER IS OBVIOUS: no. Modern medicine, which long ago transformed from knowledge into bookkeeping, can only raise the price of its “services,” yet CANNOT SOLVE the problem. Its instruments belong to the old era. It does not know the nature of life — it knows only protocols. And the change in the nature of the body’s governance lies entirely outside its competence. This is only one among many factors that CONFIRM THE COLLAPSE of the previous civilizational model.

The world has stopped receiving the control frequency information that held the entire old biosocial structure together. And the disappearance of the control core always leads to the disintegration of the structure. This is the inevitable outcome of an era that has ended. The previous programmatic form of control by the old System is no longer possible: IT NO LONGER EXISTS, and it cannot exist. This is definitive and irreversible. Any attempts to restore even fragments of the previous matrix are pointless. No administrative efforts, decisions, reforms, or “new strategies” WILL BE ABLE to restore what has been disconnected at the level of the control core itself. This System has completed its work, its functions have ceased, and its control structures have dissolved. It is for this reason that, since April 2011, the collapse of the last unfinished stage of the former Civilization HAS OCCURRED. What we are witnessing today is ALREADY THE CONSEQUENCE, manifesting through people, structures, and institutions. It cannot be stopped by acts of will — not without understanding the causes that lie in the past. And only those who are designated by the new System for true transformations will be able to understand these causes.

Any attempts by the old power structures — parliaments, ministries, state departments, administrations — to “govern” what is happening look like nothing more than buffoonery. This is not power — it is imitation. It is a theatrical gesture reproduced out of habit, when the very reality that once justified that gesture no longer exists. Those who imagined themselves the pinnacle of “self-perfection,” the crown of all-solvability, the chosen ones — are today FUNCTIONALLY NULLIFIED. Their former roles vanished together with the disappearance of the System; their “authority” is an empty shell, from which only automatic behavioral reflexes remain, creating the illusion of activity. And here it is vital to understand: IT IS THE EMOTIONS of the majority that have become the main obstacle to realizing what is happening. People react to the actions of the elite through the prism of indignation, irritation, hatred, and fear. These emotions BLOCK THE MIND, stripping it of the ability to observe and analyze. Emotions were the mechanism of the old System. Reason is what the new one requires. This is why it is so important to learn to distinguish the residual convulsions of the destroyed power structure from the real processes unfolding at the level of systemic transition.

Under the functioning of the new System, any attempts by the old institutions to act in their previous mode are perceived as NON-PROGRAMMATIC ATAVISMS. Such deviations trigger an automatic liquidation response — not political, not social, but structural. The new System does not wage war against the past, yet it does not allow its restoration. This is how the transition works. The processes of informational support of the old program did NOT DISAPPEAR in a single moment — they fade gradually, descending step by step. The intensity of the governing flows decreases sequentially, reducing the ranges and the density of connection. Today only the lowest minimal level of informational density remains — the amount necessary to maintain life conditions on Earth and to provide limited control of cellular activity. Everything else is shut down. And this has a VERDICT-LIKE CHARACTER for a significant portion of individuals with the 42nd and 44th brain genotypes: the disappearance of the former informational support deprives them of the ability for full reproduction, leaving only the possibility of limited biological survival. We observe this in the demographic curves of China, Europe, Israel, and other regions. And this is not the result of medicine, economics, or “unwillingness to have children.” It is the result of the disappearance of the old governance paradigm. The shouting and calls from podiums about “solving the demographic problem” are meaningless. Demography is NOT SOLVED by laws and social benefits. It no longer belongs to the old order. It is a process that will be resolved only within the new System — on different principles and in different forms.

Humanity today is experiencing not a crisis, rather a shift in governing logic — and this requires not political decisions, but an understanding of a person’s place within the new program of development. All attempts to preserve power through the constructions created by the social System are becoming increasingly difficult. The old mechanisms are ceasing to work, like components of a machine that has lost its engine. Conflicts at every level — local, regional, global — flare up ever more frequently, often without visible causes, as if the environment itself had become unstable. The socionic structures of states, as well as interstate relations, are RAPIDLY ACQUIRING an aggressive character, losing the capacity for coordination, compromise, and unifying purpose. In inter-confessional spaces the former condition of peaceful stability no longer exists. On the contrary — all religious interactions increasingly become a SOURCE OF TENSION, because the old governing matrix that leveled energies and constrained conflicts has disappeared. The political systems of different states display an obvious antagonism: their methodological foundations have collapsed, their value-based approaches are degrading, and every sphere of life is confidently shifting onto the rails of a corrupt and DECOMPOSING EXISTENCE. Cultural values, norms of civilized coexistence, those invisible structural supports that held humanity back from chaos — are collapsing. The world is acquiring a clear trajectory toward an inevitable downfall — not a sudden catastrophe, rather it is the LOGICAL COMPLETION of the old System. Even the “word” itself, which once functioned as an energy-informational governing signal capable of influencing human behavioral reactions, is now LOSING ITS POWER. Previously, a word issued through the Control System was a necessary and obligatory law of behavior: the brain perceived it as an instruction, the cell reacted energy-biochemically, and the person — executively. Now this mechanism is destroyed. Hence what today is called “double standards,” “triple standards,” inconsistency, paradoxical decisions, a total absence of logic — especially in politics, yet also in every sphere of governance. These are NOT JUST mistakes. They are behavioral disorientation in people left without a control signal. The executive function of the brain, long tied to external control, now works in a mode of faulty responses. However, this is ONLY THE BEGINNING. The moment is near when all established norms of behavior, previously upheld by punitive or disciplinary mechanisms of the old System, will cease to be perceived at all. People will stop hearing orders, slogans, ideological directives — not because they become freer, rather because the VERY ABILITY to perceive the control code will disappear. And this will be especially catastrophic for states whose economic prosperity depended on the former system of resource redistribution, on the exploitation of raw-material regions, and on artificially maintained balances. These constructions will NO LONGER function. The familiar well-being will become uncertain, the support will vanish, and the economic model itself will find itself without the life-supporting context that once sustained it.

All emerging systemic states, including the state of governance, are already being brought to the level of the “year zero” of the new era. This is not a calendrical metaphor, rather it is an indication of transition: the former is complete, the new is ONLY BEGINNING its first cycle. All of humanity has effectively been shifted into an initial starting mode, where what is required is not so much outward action as self-understanding. And therefore, the main task before us today is to understand ourselves and our position within these transformations. To discern what elements of the achieved level of human development will inevitably be eliminated by the new System as non-integrable, what will be preserved, and what — for all of us — requires preparation. To understand what has ended, and what is beginning its formation — this is the FIRST CONDITION OF TRANSITION.

Everything revealed in this article is not a set of assertions and not another attempt to interpret what is happening. It is a form of understanding. It is that layer of truth without which it is IMPOSSIBLE TO SEE reality as it has become after the completion of the old Control System. And the main point here is not the facts themselves, it is the reader’s ability to accept them in such a way that information transforms into knowledge. Understanding is always a step inward. Knowledge is always a step forward. Therefore, everything said here is given not to frighten, not to stir emotions, and not to condemn the world. THIS IS PREPARATION. A reference point for those who are capable of thinking holistically and seeing deeper than the surface of events. The central meaning of the current transition is this: for the first time in many millennia, humans emerge from the state of a governed object and gain the possibility of becoming the subject of their own development. However, this possibility does not open automatically and does not belong to everyone. It opens only to those who are CAPABLE OF UNDERSTANDING what is happening, who can withstand the truth about the old System and see the logic of the formation of the new one. To those who, even in the face of the destruction of former norms, retain clarity, inner order, sobriety of perception, and a thirst for knowledge. It is precisely knowledge — the key that opens the next level of the human task.

Today, every person faces a problem that unites all others: TO DEFEAT DEATH. Not metaphorically, not religiously, rather in the literal sense — as a fundamental task of the new stage of development. However, it is impossible to defeat Death without taking one of the first steps of this vast and all-encompassing project of human existence — OVERCOMING OLD AGE. Old age is not a "natural outcome of life." It is a consequence of former programs — of the System that governed the energy-biogenesis of the cell, the development of brain genotypes, and the limits of human viability. If the old System has disappeared — then its limitation disappears as well. Therefore, what is presented here is not a description of the past, but the FOUNDATION OF THE FUTURE.

This article is another step toward understanding the nature of the transition, the conditions of the new reality, and the prospects it opens. Ahead lies more. In the following articles the main thing will be revealed: how to overcome old age, how to restructure perception, how to understand the physics of the cell, how to uncover the physics of the brain, how to work with the physics of energies, and who a person of the new System must become so that the task of Victory over Death becomes not a dream, rather a developmental stage. The path is open. Now it must be taken by everyone who is capable of walking it...
