Project 369 – Brain Protocol II: The Transition

Stage...

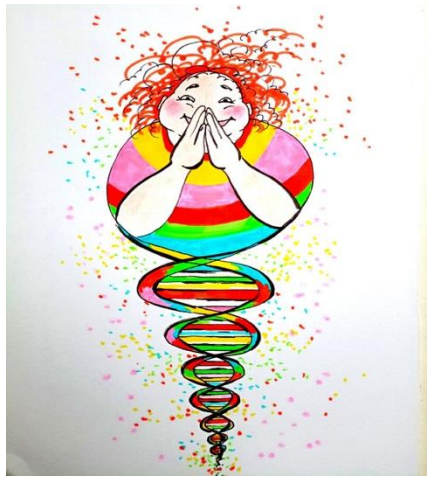

*Everything that does not transition — will be disposed.
Everything that is not perceived — will remain an illusion.
Everything that is not integrated — will vanish without a trace.*

Perhaps, no problem has ever troubled humanity as deeply as the problem of death. No other question has pressed upon the very core of human fear and reason so insistently, so painfully, so inevitably. Man is the only being known to us who possesses the ability NOT SIMPLY to instinctively avoid death, but to consciously anticipate it, to see it as the finale, as the inexorable boundary. And possessing this knowledge, he does NOT SUBMIT, rather he rises against it. It is precisely here, in this point of inner resistance, that lies the TRAGIC ESSENCE of human nature — his rebellion against finitude, against the materialist axiom: “everything that has a beginning has an end.” This is not mere fear, it is a philosophically constructed confrontation between Reason and the laws of the material world that is not yet subject to it. Man REFUSES TO ACCEPT the absoluteness of death, and this despair, this unspoken inner “no,” has given rise to entire religions, mythologies, meanings. Almost all religious systems manifested in history in one way or another promise man immortality — whether in the form of resurrection, transmigration, eternal soul, paradise existence, or cycles of reincarnation. All of this is an attempt to cope with the unbearable thought of ONE’S OWN FINALITY. Religion becomes an instrument for the survival of Reason in conditions where the body is doomed. It offers therapy — not to the body, rather to consciousness, which cannot accept its own disappearance.

If God did not exist, He would indeed have had to be invented, for He is the product of the UNBEARABLE KNOWLEDGE of death. Religion is not proof of immortality, it is its hope, its thought-form, and like every powerful thought-form, it shapes reality. That is why, from the very beginning of time — from primitive cults to cybernetic simulacra — humanity has never let go of the idea of life AFTER life. It is not merely a belief, rather a fundamental function of the psyche, the reflection of the deepest desire: to be, not to vanish, not to disintegrate. For millennia people devised methods of prolonging life, striving to preserve health, strengthen spirit, and extend existence. Some of these paths were rational, based on observation, intuition, or experience, while others were steeped in mysticism, cruelty, and illusion. From exhausting rituals to satanic practices with sacrifices, man was willing to do anything to hold on to even the ILLUSION OF CONTROL over time. However, time proved stubborn. Even the most diligent and conscious efforts to maintain health yielded only a DEFERRED PAYMENT for the inevitable: a century, at best a century and a half — no more. And even then, not youth, not clarity, not strength. Yet it is precisely now, in this historical phase, that technologies are emerging and taking form which CAN SHIFT the very axis of biological time. Modern science — fragmented as it may be, and serving the interests of those who dream of “absolute power” — is nonetheless beginning to approach the threshold beyond which mortality CEASES TO BE an axiom.

Practical, technologically reproducible methods are emerging not only for prolonging life, but for stabilizing the physical state, delaying destruction, and activating mechanisms of regeneration. What once WAS CALLED BOLDNESS is beginning to materialize — the intention not merely to live longer, rather to transcend the old formula of life, to become a rewritten Person. The one who was originally a rebel against death now BECOMES THE BEARER of a new task: to stop dying altogether. To end death not as tragedy, rather as principle. And this is no longer religion. It is not faith in the afterlife. It is the INTENTION TO CHANGE the very physical model of life. Not beyond the grave — rather here, in matter, in DNA, in the management of energy and the construction of the brain.

Before our eyes, another great hope of humanity is rapidly unfolding — the DECODING OF THE GENOME. Science, which only recently struggled to pronounce the word “DNA,” now with growing audacity invades the most hidden layers of biological architecture, promising, if not immortality, then at least the possibility of controlling time within the flesh. Peace and dread alternate in these expectations: “just a few decades” — and every section, every gene, every sequence will be read, determining NOT ONLY eye color and predisposition to illness, but also the deep vulnerability to aging, death, and oblivion. Hereditary diseases? Aging? Weakness? From now on, this is NOT A SENTENCE, rather it is a technical task. This is how those who have placed themselves in the rank of Gods think. They ALREADY SEE how artificial constructs of polymers and graphene alloys replace fragile biological organs. Muscles — on synthetics. Blood — with circulating nanoclusters. Lungs, kidneys, heart — all this is almost no longer a metaphor. The body is merely a project that can be rewritten, improved, optimized. At first — FOR HEALING. Then — for enhancement. Finally — for transformation. A 100-year-old, they promise, will look 30 and live another two hundred years unchanged. Age will no longer BE PART OF identity. It will become only a number in a passport, which itself will lose its meaning. And if all goes as planned, among us will walk living gods: those who do not die, those who do not age, those who fully own themselves. Such is the new ontology of power: not possession of resources, rather POSSESSION OF TIME.

Yet even this is only one vector. For in parallel another audacity is growing — cybertechnological. The brain, the body, perception — all of this is no longer viewed as sacred, rather it is seen as engineering. Implanted interfaces, synthesized organs, neuro-prosthetics, quantum implants — all are aimed at one thing: to reshape a person to suit the task. To create NOT JUST a superhuman, but one who is controlled, subordinated, adapted to a new system of power and calculation. Soldiers who do not know pain. Scientists who do not know doubt. Workers who DO NOT KNOW fatigue. All of them are the product of engineering selection and programmatic discipline.

Cloning and GENETIC EDITING, combined with machine code, give birth to a new population: people-devices, people-instruments. Not a metaphor — it is a direct plan. A new “working biomass,” in whose veins flows not so much blood as current. Those who can “hear” commands. Those who will LIVE BY ALGORITHM. Those who will never ask “why.” And here arises what still escapes many: this entire design, however grand it may appear, does not exceed its narrow physical-psychological framework. Because behind all this madness of engineered immortality lies the same BASIC LIMITATION embedded in the very structure of Man: THE BRAIN GENOTYPE.

Many think they are thinking. However, they are only resonating within the range of frequencies allotted to them, like a musical instrument playing only within ITS OWN OCTAVE. All the depth of thought, all the breadth of intuition, all the dream of the infinite — runs into this frame, this invisible barrier. The brain genotype is NOT FREEDOM; it is a program. It is the permitted volume of perception, beyond which lies either madness or silence. Just as a fish cannot understand the sky, so a person — beyond the limits of their genotype — CANNOT UNDERSTAND the silence of the gods. Not faith. Not knowledge. Rather permission. Everything else is ONLY IMAGINATION without authorization. And so, a new question arises: not how to create immortality, rather to whom it will be accessible? Who will receive the key? Who will truly be able to perceive and hold the infinite without destroying themselves? Who is capable not only of living forever, but of not going insane from eternity?

Or perhaps all the efforts of the “elite” are merely ANOTHER CYCLE of repeating the ancient mistake: an attempt to master Creation without being the Creator? Today, under the UNCEASING CONTROL and guidance of the “elite,” the medicine of the future is already being designed not as a system to help the sick person, rather as part of an integrated complex of control over corporeality, biomechanics, and the life cycle of the carrier. The central place in this system is given to chipping: a neuro-complex will be implanted into the human body, whose task is the UNINTERRUPTED MONITORING of physiological parameters, analysis of deviations, and the making of instantaneous decisions. These decisions will be executed by built-in cyber systems and nanorobots, capable of intervening in biological processes in real time, WITHOUT WAITING for doctors. And the brain — what will it be for then? Here, the principle of “disconnected consciousness” becomes fundamental. From now on, the human body will be perceived as a BIOLOGICAL PLATFORM, where consciousness is only a shadow on the screen. This body NO LONGER BELONGS to man. It is connected to the control network.

Already today antibiotics are nothing more than a primitive tool, working by the method of a “carpet bomb.” THE MEDICINES OF THE FUTURE WILL BE DIFFERENT. They will be precise strikes, aimed exclusively at hostile cells and pathogens. Nanorobots, smaller than viruses, will be able to penetrate the tiniest capillaries, remove tumors without incisions, regulate blood pressure and sugar levels in real time. And all of this — without pain, without surgeons, without the conscious consent of the patient. A person (his Brain) is excluded as a subject. The decisions are made by the BUILT-IN SYSTEM. However, this is only the visible side. At a deeper level, in parallel with the decoding of the genome, a new class of weapons will be created — genetic and chip-based instruments of selective destruction. A disease CAPABLE OF TAKING lives only from carriers of certain genes, skin colors, eye shapes, or even — from those who hold “incorrect” worldviews, will become technically possible. And if the chip is an interface of control, then NOTHING PREVENTS its function from shifting from medical to punitive. A command for liquidation — and the chip, integrated into the body’s system, will switch off vital functions. In parallel, microscopic nanorobots, having received the signal, will silently bring the body into a state of “biological completion.” No blood, no scream. Only the result: a dead body, processed by protocol. The person will be left with neither the possibility of resistance, nor even the time for awareness.

No one SPEAKS about this out loud, yet it is quite obvious: that all these wonders of medicine will be used only in the interests of the "upper." Mass access to TECHNOLOGIES OF IMMORTALITY is impossible not only for ethical or resource reasons, but also for reasons of structural inadmissibility. After all, even an elementary increase in the population is today recognized as a threat. Neither the economy, nor the energy sector, nor the management will be able to withstand the appearance of billions of potential long-livers. That is why, UNTIL new energy systems are created, until "replicators" appear, until the Cosmos becomes inhabited — the population must be reduced, not expanded. This is how they think, this is how they plan, this is how they program.

The elite has long called the planet's excess population "useless eaters." This is no longer even a metaphor — it is part of political language.

Such definitions legitimize any programs of reduction, deactivation, and selection. After all, why grant immortality to those incapable of thought? And the second reason why access to these technologies will be closed lies in the very nature of Man. Behind the mask of humanism hides banal egoism. No holder of power will EVER willingly share immortality, wealth, and might with the masses. No one will give up their eternal body for the sake of equality. Human nature craves to stand above others. This is not a flaw, THIS IS A PROGRAM, genetic, mental, spiritual. Even in dreaming, man dreams of superiority. And therefore, the technologies of immortality — medical nanorobots, chips, genetic keys, control systems, cyber-doctors, and energy complexes — will remain STRICTLY SEALED, accessible only to those confirmed by genotype, by function, and by degree of loyalty to the system. And at this stage the circle closes. For everything has already been said in the previous article. The entire logic of subjugation, selection, control, and retention of power goes back to that very "architecture of genotypes," within which are formed both the levels of access and the levels of thought, and the limits of permissible perception. All governance is carried out not from outside, rather THROUGH THE PROGRAM of the brain. Genotype is the clearance and the pass. Everything else is but its projection. And now it becomes clear that medicine, like everything else, is MERELY A MECHANISM of confirmation of this model. That is why we must return again and again to what has already been said earlier: immortality, like power, will belong only to those who are "admitted."

Among the "upper" there has always been another subgroup — one that can only be designated with a mercilessly exact term: "GILDED TRASH." Outwardly dazzling, inwardly rotten. Their power is not an instrument of service, rather a means of feeding their base desires. They are not creators, not strategists, not keepers of a Goal — they are biomass frozen in luxury, obsessed with the lust for domination for its own sake, pleasure for the sake of pleasure, perversion for the sheer FACT OF PERVERSION. Their thinking is the thinking of an ape-like instinct, wrapped in golden togas and political regalia. Their way of life is an infernal repetition of an ancient animalistic theater: backroom intrigues, rituals of violence, banquet debauchery, and tyranny over the bodies and souls of their subjects. In their world, right belongs NOT TO WISDOM and responsibility, it is only to force, cunning, and cynicism. They seize the heights of power not to build, rather to break; not to lead, rather to enslave. And when it is precisely this subgroup that comes to the helm, the rotting of the entire state fabric begins. The economy perishes, the social structure collapses, the spirit of the people disintegrates. Everything they touch CRUMBLES INTO DUST — yet a glittering dust, encrusted with diamonds, steeped in blood, and the sweet smell of decay.

Their ultimate goal is NOT SIMPLY an over-controlled society, rather a society stripped of the ability to think, feel, and resist. They seek not merely the suppression of will — they want to reformat THE VERY MATRIX of desire. Control not over bodies, rather over the inner world, the subconscious, the vector of aspirations. So that the ideal subject not only endures humiliation, he considers it a blessing. So that suffering is perceived as pleasure, and slavery as the only form of freedom. So that in every mind there is an implanted program of “contentment” — a SEWN-IN CHIP of the psyche, compelling people to love their executioners.

In a world built by the "GILDED TRASH," progress serves pain. The more powerful their technologies, the more sophisticated the torture becomes. The higher the level of control, the subtler the torment. They are no longer satisfied with physical violence — they need to rule the soul. They crave an era where the very possibility of resistance disappears, and NO laws, religions, or moral codes can prevent them from doing whatever crosses their minds. They dream of a world where subjects are finally turned into a voiceless human herd, into “two-legged raw material,” into BIOLOGICAL PLASTIC fit for use, processing, or disposal. Death inflicted for amusement will be the norm. Humiliation — a daily practice. Ordinary human life will cease to have any value whatsoever. Entire generations will be born only to BE DESTROYED in the spectacles of new Caesars. There have already been precedents. Cambodia, the Khmer Rouge, Pol Pot — that was only a test launch. An experiment to measure the limit of human endurance. People there lived in conditions close to hell — and survived. It was a signal to the “gilded trash” of just how much the human body is CAPABLE OF ENDURING if its spirit is stripped away first.

In the coming world, arranged by these pampered sadists, the workday will become endless. Weekends, vacations, sick leave, pensions — all that was once called “social” will be burned away as heresy. Free time — abolished. However, holidays will remain. For the rabble — as a release valve. The holidays will be wild: gladiatorial combats, narcotic orgies, public executions, sexual fairs, and sophisticated mass spectacles where death and lust intertwine in the climax of ritual crowd-control. This is NOT A DYSTOPIA. This is a plan. A plan for a society built on humiliation, on managed suffering, and on the eternal power of the “gilded trash” who have TURNED TECHNOLOGY into an instrument of evil. And precisely here lies the profound difference between the true Elite, who lead toward the Absolute, and the degenerate imitators, who turn progress into satanism, power into torture, and Man into mere inventory. However, even the “gilded trash” has an EXPIRATION DATE. A society built on pain is not eternal. The only question is what force will rise against them — and when it will awaken.

Between the true “elite” and what can rightly be called the “gilded trash,” there is an irreconcilable, brutal, NEVER-ENDING WAR — a struggle of worldviews, a struggle of ontologies. However, if we look at history, at the logic of humanity’s gradual ascent toward reason, it becomes clear: it was not perverted degradation that ultimately triumphed, it was the VECTOR OF DEVELOPMENT. It was the true Elite that prevailed, driven by the pursuit of perfection, of progress, of moving beyond the animal, of overcoming biological nature. For if everything were determined solely by the TRIUMPH OF PARASITIC "gilded trash," we would still be hairy apes with stones in our hands, and not launching spacecraft beyond the Solar System or touching the very fabric of life in genetic laboratories.

Yes, the "gilded trash" at times prevailed. It was precisely then that great civilizations collapsed, consumed by luxury, debauchery, and brute cruelty. It was then that TRUTH BURNED on the pyres, while bearers of genuine knowledge were exterminated by religious fanatics, bureaucrats, and shepherds of fear. The USSR fell NOT ONLY under the pressure of external enemies, but also under the weight of its own internal "gilded trash," disguised as "managers," "reformers," and "humanists." And today they feast UPON THE RUINS of a great idea, tearing to pieces the corpse of a Civilization they neither understood nor were faithful to. Yet even if they laugh, it is a feast in the midst of plague. They celebrate the death of something they were never capable of building, nor of comprehending.

Within the framework of today's reality, it will not always be this way. The new laws of development under the New Management System are strict. And even among those who TODAY

LAUGH, many feel an understanding gnawing into the flesh of their consciousness: what is happening is not chaos, it is a program. A program they DID NOT WRITE. Yet what to do with this understanding — they do not know. They cannot step beyond the limits of their genotype. It is not will, nor resources, that they lack — it is access.

No matter how the forms of power change, its foundation remains the same: fear. Both the "elite" and the "gilded trash" HOLD THE MASSES through force. Fear is the universal tool of control, as ancient as the instinct for survival. Violence works WITHOUT FAIL. However, violence is not only an instrument applied to the lower classes — it is also a form of war among the highest themselves. Because among them there is a STRUGGLE. Silent, hidden, creeping — and precisely because of this, even more merciless. A struggle of elites within elites. A struggle for the right to be God in the new world. And in this struggle, MILLIONS PERISH — not in trenches, rather in conference rooms, in shadow committees, and in digital decision-making systems. Where the future is being created, the WEAK, the uncontrollable, the ineffective, the interfering are being DESTROYED. The winners of this undercover battle hope to become omnipotent. They dream of gaining the status of deities: immortal, all-seeing, invulnerable. In their view, this will be the CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT OF THE EVOLUTION of power. However, the struggle among the upper is not a single line, it is a chaotic mesh of countless interests: geopolitical, economic, racial, religious, cultural, linguistic. They themselves are not united. They fight each other — and it is precisely in this war that the future of the world is forged. The outcome is NOT PREORDAINED. No "top" is insured against downfall. Victory in one cycle is no guarantee of power in the next. Even the most powerful can BE THROWN OUT of the game if they fail to sense the moment. Only fools believe they are in power forever.

Today, in the context of the fracture of the global structure of power and the transformation of old scenarios, humanity faces two real threats, each carrying NOT SIMPLY a risk but an ontological trial. The first threat is internal, the second external. And BOTH ARE INTERCONNECTED, entwined like two ends of the same snake biting its own tail. The INTERNAL THREAT is chaos produced from within, the result of fierce struggle between different clusters of the "upper" within a single state. This hidden conflict manifests in the degradation of governance, the substitution of concepts, the loss of historical purpose, the hijacking of meaning. Against this backdrop, the MOST DANGEROUS part of the "middle" becomes active — that "revolutionary" stratum striving to break through to power under slogans of justice and renewal, yet in fact bringing only instability and destruction. Further down the social scale, the CRIMINALIZED part of the "lower" GROWS STRONGER, fueled by betrayed expectations, an acute sense of injustice, and deliberately stoked instincts. This triple configuration — enmity among the upper, the breakthrough of the middle, and the destructive potential of the lower — becomes the perfect BREEDING GROUND for intervention from without. And this leads us to the external threat. As always, it is born from the desire of one set of "upper" to crush, conquer, or annihilate another. The battle for control over territory, resources, information, and technology continues, sharpens, accelerates. States are the EXTERNAL SHELL of the "upper," fused with governance, security structures, economies, and cultural matrices. If one such shell shows weakness, if a METASTASES of self-destruction BEGINS inside it — it immediately becomes the target of attack. The victors are never judged. And the defeated — inherit history rewritten by their enemies.

Today Humanity enters the ultimate threshold — the place where all former illusions end. Where it is no longer possible to pretend that one can still do WITHOUT UNDERSTANDING the essence of what is happening. Where the beautiful formulas of humanism no longer work, nor the soothing incantations about progress for all and an equal future for everyone. The historical fabric of the world is stretched to its limit. In its fibers there is no harmony anymore — only the rumble of an APPROACHING FRACTURE. And it is precisely here — on the brink of final biological catastrophe and the launch of an entirely new control structure — that man stands, driven into the DEAD END OF HIS FINITENESS, yet still capable of defiance. What I wanted to show readers is that this is not merely a philosophical prelude. It is the plain recognition. The recognition of enemies and genuine threats. The recognition of hidden protocols of power and those who hide behind the mask of the elite. The recognition of the deep function of the Brain Genotype as the foundation of the entire CONTROL ARCHITECTURE — not only over biology, but also thinking and destiny. This is the cartography of the darkness we already inhabit, which has not yet seized the last thing: our right to SAY: "NO." Inner resistance still lives, reason still flickers, the veil can still be torn away — if only there is enough courage to admit that we are not merely at the edge, we have already stepped beyond it.

Then a completely different field begins: the FIELD OF COLLECTION. The Transition field. The point where it will become clear: do we have enough not only pain and awareness, but also the strength and the will for a RADICAL REFORMATTING of the world — not according to the templates of a parasitic civilization, rather according to the original, uncorrupted formula of Creation. In the next part begins the search not merely for an exit, rather for the foundation of the New. There, it is no longer only a diagnosis. There — it is a step toward action. In this choice lies NOT MERELY a political or ideological decision, it is an ontological effort — to Be. To CEASE TO BE a puppet. To cease to be the function of another's will. To BEGIN TO SEE not only one's role, to see also one's limit. To see one's Brain Genotype as the condition of admission — as the threshold that cannot be crossed without transformation. In the next article — we together will not simply CONTINUE TO EXPOSE the mechanisms of suppression and reprogramming — we will enter the very fabric of the System to see: whether it is possible to step beyond the architecture in which man was only an EXECUTOR'S CODE. And if so — then how? Who exactly? And with what inner transformation?

The transition does not begin with reforms. The transition begins with recognition: you were a construction. And now you can become a Creator...
