Coding of information by Complexes and Objects differs, both in essence and in tabular semantic technology, and have different bases: - encoding of information by Complexes of Control Systems; the System, through its Control Complexes, forms and encodes information that has a functional level, as "common to all", having a format - "messages", using for this purpose the encoding table "24 *24" in the 12-digit number system. It has both a cognitive and controlling functional character.

- coding by objects, as well as to the address of objects from the System itself; Objects are understood as so-called UFOs, according to secular understanding. It should be noted that it is the objects (980 types in total) that are assigned a special function to directly manage individuals of a separate brain genotype, the so-called "Golden Billion". The System manages the objects themselves directly. Information for both objects and brain genotypes of the "Golden Billion" is transmitted in a single information stream, encoded using the 8*8 character code table and has the same capacity of 124 characters, but contains much more "service" symbols.

Construction of the Earth's Atmosphere gratings

All the true layers of the Atmosphere, as the most complex harmonious construction of a strictly identified set of its energy grids, were formed during the model creation of the Earth, i.e., the formation of a certain part of the uncreated "Created World" as a whole.

It was such a true layered Design of the Atmosphere that provided, first of all, the very existence and management of programmatic (freely granted) "Living Conditions and Controlled Environment", which in turn fundamentally founded the very fact of the "origin" and existence of true Life itself, with its orientation on a "Reasonable basis". Moreover, only such a specific Design of the Atmosphere should have been one of the mandatory conditions and, at the same time, an important closing link in the formation of mandatory conditions for ensuring the gradual development of the Mind of the Earth and its unconditional very important hypostasis, the Human Mind. There could be no other harmony in the process of the development of a true Civilization on Earth, and everything else is inexpedient, i.e., deadly for intelligent life. This is its true programmatic essence and embodied civilizational essence.

Environment control

– this is one of the management functions with a target orientation aimed at obtaining comprehensive information about the state and results of the program processes, their comprehensive support and provision with the necessary conditions for implementation, as well as identifying the need for correction of any actions or processes. From the very definition and its functional endowment, control is directly related to information as such. We will limit the scope of our research only to the control of the environment, as a place of residence of people and the conditions of people themselves.

The control of the environment is divided into parts according to constructive and functional definitions.

The constructive construction of the vertical control system is represented by tiers divided by height, namely: -4,400-0 m; 0-1,000 m; 1,000-12,400 m; 12,400-424,000 meters. Beyond 424,000 m, the structure of the radiation grid begins, where human existence is impossible, even by means of isolation, such as spacesuits (when the biostructure moves in the environment of the radiation grid of space, its entire life potential will be "eaten" to restore the energy balance of the grids). In this range, only the rate of decay of the human brain is checked, depending on the state of the lattice. We wish success in the "repetition" of the flight to the moon to American astronauts.

Biostructure complex

The whole complex of the biostructure is a part of the program control and executive harmony of a complex information system, which, just like all information, is built on the same digital basis, only built in the narrow spectra of all those frequencies that people possess. Without them, people are insufficiently controlled, and therefore incorrectly oriented in their programmatic development in all areas of their practical material application.

Control of biostructures - Hell and Heaven

The principle of creating both Heaven and Hell is the same - a "frying pan" is created, bordered by the lower layer of the atmosphere and a "fence" - a ring of pyramids at the nodes of the Hartman zones. The initial formation is a "drop", externally observed as a rainbow. Inside this frying pan (if it is Paradise), it is possible to create ideal conditions for the existence of the matrix. At the same time, others will feel uncomfortable. If this is Hell, then sinners can be fried in a frying pan until they are ruddy.

Taking into account previous experience, it is impossible to conduct an experiment on the entire territory at once (especially if you own a control system). It is easier to create autonomous frying pans – on one to roast sinners, on the other to get AIDS, on the third to experiment with the liver, and so on. The size of the frying pan does not exceed several tens of kilometers, but the results are used to correct the program.

Hell is created not only for the remaining matrices of the inhabitants of the Earth, but also for those who have lost contact with their object, while extraneous objects are destroyed in the usual way.

Why is it still not possible to combine the matrix with a living cell without losing part of the matrix? The symbiosis of a living cell and radiation frequencies led to the mutation of the cell and the appearance of ligaments in it to retain radiation frequencies. Studies show that a living cell is already radioactive, but this does not mean that all issues have been resolved.

The limits of regulation of radioactive frequency support nodes are different for different types of matrices. If as a percentage, then from 5 to 45%, which is not enough for full control. If you add potentials, the elasticity of the ionic structure decreases and signs of radiation damage appear (X-ray detects darkening). If you reduce it, diabetes mellitus appears. That's why they conduct annual sessions of experiments in Hell.

The concept of Paradise is currently defined as a cap, inside which the original mode of existence of matrices is fully maintained without mutation of a living cell, in order to return the matrix to the object without flaws, if necessary.

The concept of Hell is a frying pan for conducting experiments. Two large frying pans are the coast of Crimea and Sochi, and additionally the Rostov and Krasnodar regions. As a rule, experiments are carried out at maximum loads (summer) and no more than 12 days with a break of 6 days. There are quite a lot of people willing to take part in experiments during this period.

Control systems have autonomous zones that are not affected by changes, since they are protected by their objects that are inaccessible to control systems.

DNA Codons

- these are the nodes with respect to which information blocks are formed

Control over the preservation of the undistorted essence of the information semantic content is carried out by a system network of specialized management servers and hubs located at a depth of 1,200 meters, connected to each other and having energy pyramidal exits to the surface.

Exit points, as a rule, are equipped with the construction of specialized structures (temples, churches, chapels, etc.), the structure of which allows for the control of information flow (survey). The information received during the "survey" is sent to the analytical structure (Control Complex Ireland, depth 4,200 m). The difference in indicators is eventually returned to the Kailas complex for making appropriate program decisions or corrections to keep the management process within the semantic and target framework of the resulting Vector of Goals of phenomena, actions and events. In such an organized way, the system process of management support, including the existence of people, is carried out.

Crop circles

So, all circles, including crop circles, create Objects (UFOs).

The location of all UFOs on Earth is $-3,300 > h > -4,400$ meters. Sea-based objects do not create circles. If the Object is located under your house, it will create a circle, but no one will notice it, while your condition may change dramatically when moving from the tram to the house. Most UFOs are located under populated areas. Unexpected destruction of houses, the disappearance of the Internet; communications may also be associated with the activation of UFOs, and it has nothing to do with Space. All UFOs have laser weapons, which are also used for feedback with the Object Control System through the atmosphere grid.

All intruders are removed from the "canvas" before the drawing is created. This is accomplished by turning on a low-frequency generator (similar to creating "flying Dutchmen"). It is not necessary to chase the intruders in the whole radius. When information about the absence of intruders appears on the Object, a text transmission is made (12 minutes).

Upon completion of the transfer, a picture confirming the address of the Object is installed. According to the drawing, you can identify:

- the type of Object;
- coordinates of the Object on the map of the Object Management System;
- the text of the message (Chinese). Chinese letters are images (not letters). In one image (hieroglyph) there can be a word or a text. The drawing is a system of "hieroglyphs", and through the lattice of the atmosphere this image is transmitted to the Control System.

Places of worship

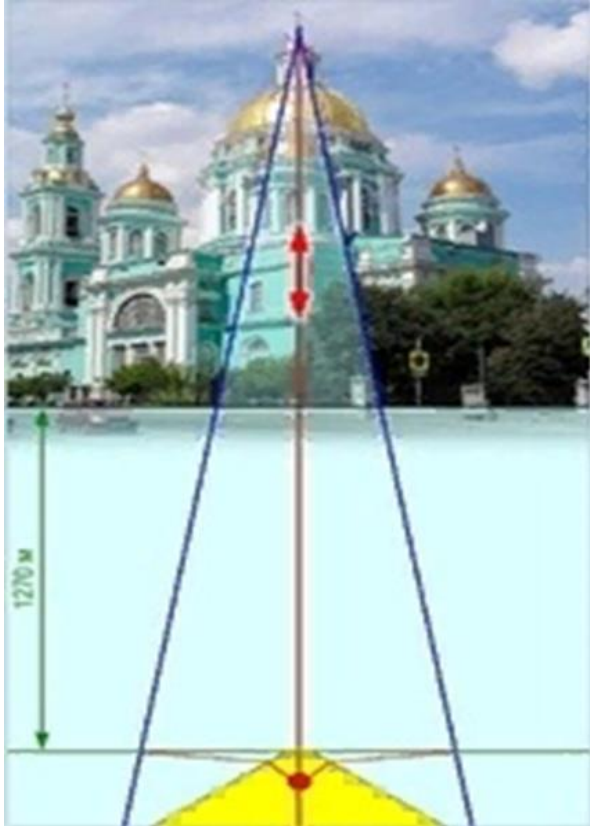

In order for all individuals to receive the entire necessary information in a timely manner, which they urgently needed for the functioning of the brain, religious buildings of a special design were developed and created, at the prompting of the System.

No representative of the church will be able to explain to you why the shape of the onion was chosen for the dome of the church, for them it is a matter of course, i.e., "it is a gift given."

When creating an information network, initially, information broadcast hubs in the form of balls were placed in some nodes of the Hartman zone. The diameter of the ball is from 2 to 33 cm, it had the properties of a piezoelectric element.

It was over such a ball that it was necessary to build a church. By 1000 A.D., the number of such concentrators was 3,260 balls, until Easter 2009 their number no longer exceeded 1000 units, by now operating in an active program control state no longer exists, since their information translational activities have been stopped. On the surface above such a concentrator, the construction of a specific cult structure was built, the total number of which, i.e., "correct" churches, temples and mosques should not exceed the number of working concentrators. If a church (mosque or temple) did not stand on the vertical axis of the ball's information broadcast, then they were outside the receiving and transmitting activity zone. Previously, every merchant sought to build a church for himself (forty churches in Moscow alone), but not all of them had real effectiveness, but only had a secondary relay character of maintaining rituals of service and mass. This was suitable for those individuals who did not need the entire information broadcast, since they had an immanent state according to the functions of their brain, i.e., their executive process was based on a vital decision made for them by other individuals. Since the deviation of the axis of the structure should not exceed 12 cm relative to the axis of the translation tube, the location of the main dome had to be as accurate as possible, otherwise the church is functionally useless. Many legends and fairy tales have developed over the history of all religious denominations regarding how the place of construction of such structures was miraculously chosen, what event was timed, what wonderful manifestations occurred during and after the construction – all this is a manifestation of the active work of the information hub.

The best option for Moscow was the Elokhovsky

Temple. For various historical reasons, only those churches that were correctly placed have always remained untouched. The Cathedral of Christ the Savior is outside the Hartman zone in general. Relative to the information concentrator placed at depth, energy grids in the form of pyramids were created. The energy of the first pyramid, i.e., the small pyramid, is built at frequencies of 71 octaves, which provided direct access to information in the brain of individuals, but it is impossible to create temples at such a depth. Energy characteristics of the secondary pyramid, i.e., large – were built at frequencies of 43.5 octaves, which provided the primary decoding of the transmitted information through the appropriate music translator, as an information block. According to the program correction of the management processes carried out on 14 November, 2005, for the reception of information by individuals, it was required to have a 49.5 octave of translation (64 times higher). The role of the converter was played by a large pyramid, which had an outlet directly into the base of the cross above the main dome. For this reason, the characteristics of the great pyramid have been rebuilt. This applies to both Orthodox churches and Catholic cathedrals, as well as minarets (mosques). All religious buildings, except synagogues, are a double-acting pump used both for information saturation and as one of the technical elements of the control system. When reading information from the brain of individuals occurring on specific program days indicated in religious ritual calendars under the guise of some thematic service, the arrow is indicated down. Those who participate in such a service leave the church "spiritualized" and "forgiven" for all their deeds. And during the period of information broadcast, the arrow is indicated up – all complex information is recorded in the brain of individuals, including information of a controlling and cognitive nature.

During the "recording" period, the process of erasing unnecessary information is carried out, with the release of the energies from this through the tip of the dome. Many inquisitive observers at such moments observed various glowing clouds over the church or could photograph various exotic natures of the glow. The people come out with new information and begin to fulfill what was predetermined by the acquired information. All holidays, as well as all days of information removal, are programmatically "painted" and are given in various calendars of all religious denominations. As for the visitors of the synagogue, they do not need the construction of the structure, as with other religious denominations, because the translational process and reception of information takes place in a different way, since they have specific control frequencies in the functions of the brain that ensure the reception and transmission of information without such a structure. For their performing actions, they need information somewhat easier than the rest. In this regard, all religious buildings for Judaism are really structurally different from buildings of other types of religious trends. Structurally, the greatest flow of received and transmitting information is provided in churches, since their main "towers" are fully commensurate with the shape of the top of a large pyramid built above the hub. Such an inconspicuous feature is characteristic – most Catholics are geographically located exactly where the territories are accompanied and covered by information broadcasting management servers connected to the Alpine Management Complex.

Caucasian Management Complex - serves Orthodoxy and Muslims.
